Hints for Homemakers

By Jane Rogers

An excellent way to remove grease spots from wall paper is to cover the spots with powdered French chalk. Leave it on for twenty-four hours, then brush off. If the spots have not disappeared, repeat the application, laying a piece of blotting paper over each of the chalked spots and pressing with a warm iron.

To preserve the freshness and flavor of fresh fish over a period of two or three days, sprinkle the inside with sugar, keeping the fish in a horizontal position so that the sugar may penetrate as much as possible. Use one tablespoon of sugar to a five-pound fish.

CO. DISTRICTS MADE FOR WHEAT PLAN

Farmers who agree to reduce their wheat acreage the amount designated by the secretary of agriculture will receive 20 cents per bushel benefit payment this fall and another payment of eight cents per bushel late next spring when it is definitely established that he made the acreage reduction that the agreement called for, according to recent announcement from national administrators of the wheat plan. These payments, totaling approximately 28 cents per bushel, will not be paid upon the entire crop but upon 54 per cent of each farmer's average annual production for the base period that is used. In other words, the farmer who accepts the plan and sells his wheat, will get the market price for all his crop plus this benefit payment of probably 28 cents for 54 per cent of his annual production. If he does not want to sell the wheat but feeds it all on the farm, he will still receive the payment on his allotment of 54 per cent.

Farmers appointed to the advisory committee have tentatively divided the county into seven districts. The districts designated may be altered somewhat prior to the holding of community meetings. Centers or meeting places in each of these districts will be about as follows: Sherwood, Aloha, West Union, Roy, Forest Grove, Gaston and Laurel. As soon as the figure for the amount of the reduction is set, and some of the necessary forms are available, meetings will be held in each of these communities and those farmers who are interested will have an opportunity of making application and supplying the necessary data for making individual allotments.

The amount of the benefit payment on the allotments is based upon the difference between the average market price of wheat and a parity price. Parity price means that price which enables the farmer to buy the same amount of goods with his wheat as he bought in the period of 1910 to 1914. If a large percentage of the wheat growers over the country refused to accept the wheat plan and increased their wheat acreage, and if this increase in acreage resulted in a continued surplus that brought about a relatively low price for wheat, then the benefit payment to the farmer who had accepted the plan would probably be increased as the spread between the average market price and parity price would logically be supposed to increase.

Administrators of the wheat act state that the administering of the act is going to be left largely to the farmers themselves. In each county where there is an average annual production of 100,000 or more bushels of wheat a control association will be formed of those farmers desiring to take advantage of the provisions of the act. The members in each district will elect one member to the board of directors of the association. This board will direct the plan within its county and through the allotment committee of the board will make all the allotments for farmers within the county.

SPOILED CANNED FOOD DUE TO MANY THINGS

"Trouble shooting" for home canners has convinced Lucy A. Case, extension nutrition specialist at Oregon State college, that about 50 different things may go wrong and spoil the food—and she is just as strong an advocate of home canning as ever.

A puzzled and rather discouraged homemaker recently brought to Miss Case some cans of peaches from a batch of 50 half-gallon jars that had spoiled. It turned out that standard screw-top jars had been sealed with inferior aluminum caps. Tiny holes were found in these caps, evidently eaten through by the acid in the fruit. As soon as this occurred air got in and the food spoiled. Standard caps with the name of the jar manufacturer stamped inside the top, probably would have prevented this loss of good food and labor.

Jars of spoiled peas were examined, some of which showed a slight leakage. The lids were of the self-seal type with screw band, and the sealing composition was entirely gone in places, leaving the glass against the bare tin. In completing the seal of the jars, the owner had failed to hold the lid still while the screw band was turned. As a result, the sealing composition, softened by heat, had probably been displaced, causing a poor seal. In another case the composition lids were apparently of last year's manufacture, and all of the jars had failed to seal.

Other jars of spoiled peas were brought where undercooking was the cause of spoilage, as they had been processed in hot water only two hours. Another homemaker whose canned peas had spoiled, had allowed the peas to stay in a hot kitchen all night, and half the next day, piled deep in a metal tub. The peas were probably "soured" before canning. Two hours from garden to can is an excellent rule, as is picking in shallow, porous containers, such as small baskets, says Miss Case.

Mrs. Mary Evans, Miss Lillian Evans and little Ronald Whitworth left for Lake Lytle Sunday, where they will remain for several weeks.

Scrap Heap Stuff

"My liquor bill at the old Blanco Hotel, where I lived in Marshfield, ran higher than my board bill," said our friend the printer.

"My business was about to be closed out to pay off the debts. I saw myself a tramp printer with a few days in this town and that between drunks."

"I had used all my will power time and again, and tried everything, and there was no help. I was a goner. Then the big meetings came on, and I went down one night to hear the singing. Just as I got in the man began to speak. He had my number. I saw a little gleam of light and went up front and cried to the Lord to help a poor down and outer."

"I don't know what happened, but when I got up the drink craving was gone. I am here yet; debts long since paid off; the business long since on its feet, and only the old-timers remember what I was."

Do they come from among the human wrecks that those nail-pierced hands of our Lord gather in his gems?

Come all who take their stand that Christ's death for their sins clears them. "All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid upon Him"—upon Christ—"the iniquities of us all."—Bible.
