PRICELESS CARVING ON VIEW AT FAIR

Exquisitely carved in mother of pearl, a presentation of the "Last Supper" is one of the priceless objects of ecclesiastical art on exhibit at the Hall of Religion at the Chicago World's Fair—A Century of Progress Exposition.

This masterpiece, which was carved by an Armenian artist, Ivar, required twenty-seven years of intricate labor to complete. It was finished about 170 years ago. The minute work necessary was such a strain on the artist's ocular nerves that several months after the carving was completed he became totally blind.

The carving is the property of John Korenian, who is a direct descendant of the man who created it.

Christ and the Twelve Apostles at the Last Supper are shown in the carving. The detailed work is so meticulous that one can see not only the pattern of the tablecloth, but the eyelashes and facial expression of each person sitting around the table.

HUMIDIFIED HOME AIR PROTECTS HEALTH, HOUSE & FURNISHINGS

1-LACK OF HUMIDITY
THE AIR HERE is as dry as it is here
SAHARA DESERT

2-ONE RESULT—Dry, overheated, stagnant air responsible for colds, pneumonia, influenza, and other respiratory infections

3-ANOTHER RESULT—Super-dry air causes furniture and woodwork to split and fall apart and plants smother to death

4-THE REMEDY—Adequate Humidity with a warm air heating system assures comfort and protects health

NEEDLE FROM HOLE REQUIRES EVAPORATION OF 5 TO 6 GALLONS OF WATER A DAY DURING HEATING SEASON FOR PROPER HUMIDIFICATION

DAMAGE DONE BY SUPER-DRY AIR

Atmosphere, Humidity-Hungry, Sucks Moisture From Occupants, Household Furnishings.

DISEASE and discomfort for humans, and damage to expensive furniture and other household furnishings, lurk in present-day methods of home heating, states the Holland Institute of Thermology of Holland, Mich.

In substantiation of the foregoing, the Institute points to the prevalence of colds and other respiratory infections that become epidemic with the commencement of the winter heating season, and to the damage to tables, chairs, pianos, and to interior woodwork subjected to the "drying-out" effect of winter indoor air.

As the standards of living have changed and efficient heating systems have replaced the old base-burner and cook stove, the serious effects of moisture deficiency in the home air are becoming more and more evident. The old practice of wash days, baking days, the ever-boiling tea-kettle, and the ironing days, which once were the source of much household moisture, are no more. An adequate supply of moisture is sadly lacking in the home of today.

The air in homes may well be termed super-dry. This is due to the fact that winter air does not contain much moisture. As air is heated, it expands and has greater moisture capacity. To supply this, it draws upon every object that may contain moisture. And the result is dried-out household equipment. Human beings are not immune. The dry air draws the moisture from their skin, and dries out and irritates the delicate membranes in the nose and throat that under normal conditions conserve health. Bodily resistance to disease is broken down, and persons easily "take cold" or become infected with the disease germs that cause influenza, tonsillitis, bronchitis, pneumonia, and other ills of the respiratory tract.

The only remedy for this unhealthy condition lies in artificial humidification of the home air. To supply an adequate amount of moisture, at least a gallon of water per room should be evaporated each day. This is no longer difficult of accomplishment. Modern warm air systems of the vapor air type are equipped with an automatic humidifier that evaporates from 3 to 25 gallons of water daily, according to requirements. These humidifiers enable the maintenance of a relative humidity of 40 to 50 per cent—an ample supply of moisture in the air to conserve health and to prevent the drying out of costly furnishings. Furthermore, properly moistened air assures genuine physical comfort at moderate temperatures of 70 or 72 degrees.
