THE SEWAGE QUESTION.

In another column appears a communication from a group of prominent taxpayers in which the proposed sewer system and sewage disposal plant is viewed somewhat with eyes askance. That is, they question the ability of the town to enter into contractual relations with the government in view of the present state of its finances.

Mr. Palmer is a well-known engineer of ability and is willing at any time to appear here, and as many times as is necessary, to address the taxpayers on the question. He has all of the details of the matter at his finger ends. He is not trying to sell anything to the citizens of Beaverton, but he is intensely interested in every city in the state has an adequate and up-to-date sewer system and a pollution-proof disposal plant.

THE PWA AND ICKES.

Protests from all over the United States are being forwarded to Washington regarding the dilatory tactics of Public Works Administrator Ickes in the appropriation of the $3,500,000,000 fund appropriated by the recent congress for public works. Ickes apparently believes that he must follow the old custom established by Washington bureaucracy in the use of red tape. If he personally does not approve of any project he finds innumerable excuses for delay or changes in the plans of the sponsors of the improvement, with the result that billions of dollars appropriated in good faith by congress lie idle in the treasury while millions of unemployed are crying for work and the means with which to supply their suffering families with the necessities of life.

The proposed Bonneville dam is an example of the obstructive tactics of the administrator. The project called for an expenditure of $31,000,000 and had been endorsed by President Roosevelt, but despite the friendliness of the chief executive, and the further fact that the project had been approved by Chief Engineer Brown, Ickes insisted on reducing the dam from its proposed height of 72 feet, which also included a power unit, to a 30-foot height providing for navigation facilities only. This would cut the appropriation to $15,000,000, instead of $31,000,000, and would automatically defeat the intent of the entire program.

Thanks, however, to the activity of Senator McNary and Congressman Martin, the president's attention was called to the obstructive tactics of Ickes and he has given his unqualified approval of the original program.

Ickes' attitude, to say the least, smells strongly of political influence brought to bear by the big power interests, who, of course, are violently opposed to the proposed improvement. We are fortunate in having a congressional representation in Washington constantly on guard to look after the interests of Oregon, and doubly fortunate in having a man in the executive chair who does not hesitate to use the powers given him by congress to cut out all red tape procedure and political influence in order to get direct action when such action is needed and imperative.

WELCOME THE HUMMER.

Beginning with this issue of the Review, the Hummer, the official newspaper of the Beaverton high school, makes its appearance. The Review extends its congratulations and especially wishes to commend the Hummer staff for the journalistic excellence of the publication. And best of all, the Hummer starts off with a circulation of 375 subscribers. This shows that the staff has plenty of pep, and the Review predicts that a record will be established during the present school term.

WORDS OF APPRECIATION.

We are in receipt of many expressions of appreciation, verbally and through the mails, and would like to publish all of them, but modesty compels us to refrain. However, we cannot resist giving space to the following, which appeared last week in the News-Berger, one of the outstanding weekly newspapers in Oregon: "Congratulations are certainly due Fred C. Sefton, who has taken over the Beaverton Review, for the fine showing made by him in cleaning up that paper and giving it the appearance of a real newsy chronicle of the weekly happenings in that community. Editor Sefton has already proven himself a newspaper man to his fellow editor; and no doubt will make a success in his new venture."

RELIEF FOR HOME OWNERS.

Reports from every section in Oregon indicate that the Home Owners Loan corporation is functioning in a most satisfactory manner and relief is being given to the distressed small home owner, according to J. P. Lipscomb, state manager of the corporation.

Manager Lipscomb early this week stressed the following points in connection with the Home Owners Loan corporation:

The corporation is the keystone of the NRA program. Unless the home owner saves his place the NRA cannot be successful, so closely are the NRA and the home owners loan units inter-related.

Under the national recovery program all must make sacrifices. The holder of mortgages should do his part by taking the corporation bonds. It is simply a matter of patriotism.

The Home Owners Loan corporation bonds are 4 per cent semiannual bonds for 18 years, the government guaranteeing the interest for this term.

The corporation bonds are nontaxable. In many states a 4 per cent bond that is nontaxable is as good as a taxable 6 per cent investment.

The United States treasury accepts these bonds as security for federal deposits at par, in that respect placing them on equality with any United States bond.

Holders of mortgages, bankers and investors should be advised that if the corporation fails due to lack of support and millions of homes are sold under the hammer, the value of their billions in home mortgages also will be destroyed.

Within a short time large numbers of these loans will be closed in Oregon, thereby throwing hundreds of thousands of dollars into the county treasuries of the state to take care of unpaid taxes. Schools and all divisions of the state government will be benefited and a positive step toward recovery will have begun.

Somebody captured a two-headed snake up in Portland the other day. We hesitate to say how many heads it would have had a few months hence.

The courts have ruled in the past that every dog is entitled to one bite. In the case of the traffic cop where the canine occupant of a car took his allotted quota, we would suggest that he be given another one for good measure.

It certainly makes a fellow feel good to hear all the commendatory remarks about what an improved paper the Review is under the new management, but it would surely make us feel a whole lot better if some of them would say: "Here, old top, is a 10-inch double column ad for this week's issue."

"What will happen to Ford if he fails to sign the NRA code?" asks an exchange. Well, Henry isn't any fool, and we venture to predict that nothing will happen, because when he gets tired of hooching his competitors and the NRA administration he will be a good boy and put his name on the dotted line.

Naturally the major oil companies are opposed to the idea of the national administration arbitrarily fixing gas prices. They have muted the traveling public over such a long period by manipulating the prices of their products that they have come to believe, like Kaiser Wilhelm, in divine privilege. It is to be hoped that the administration will step in and fix a maximum price at which gas and other by-products of petroleum may be sold to consumers.

In last week's issue of the Review in an editorial criticizing the town board, the statement was made that "personal feelings should not be permitted to enter into the deliberations of the council." Councilman Barnes states that he has no personal feeling whatever against the town attorney, but merely is acting in the interests of the taxpayers of the town of Beaverton. The Review is glad to make this correction.

WHEAT GROUP ORGANIZES.

The Washington County Wheat Control association met at the office of County Agent W. F. Cyrus recently and organized a board of directors. W. J. Enchede of Hillsboro was elected president; Ferd Langer of Sherwood vice president; Arthur Connell of Hillsboro route 1, treasurer; John Kamma of Hillsboro and Glen Ritchey of Forest Grove were elected members of the allotment committee. County Agent Cyrus was chosen to act as secretary of the board.

Homemakers' Exchange

BY C. A. M.

Since this copy must be in earlier than your questions can be, my answers to them must be deferred until next week. After that we hope there will be no delay.

The daily papers are full of canning articles, but I shall be glad to answer any questions on that subject if you have difficulty.

In the meantime here is the perfect "gingerbread" for which I have waited long. It is so good for the children's school lunches and so very delicious served warm for dessert, with whipped cream or fresh applesauce or both.

Soft Gingerbread

- 1 egg
1/2 cup molasses
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup sour milk
1/2 cup melted fat
1 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
2 1/2 cups flour (or a little less)
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon ginger

Beat the egg, add the other ingredients in order given without mixing until all are in. Then mix well, beat a little and pour into paper-lined oiled shallow pans (a 10-inch square pan is just right). Bake in a moderate oven until firm and brown, about one-half hour.

Remember that all measurements are level and flour sifted before measuring. I always vary this recipe by adding 3 tablespoons powdered or grated chocolate (cutting 1/2 cup flour) and 1/2 cup raisins. Will you try this and tell me how you like it?

Perhaps I should add a little about oven canning or it will be too late. With a heat-controlled gas or electric oven the directions are given and it is easy, but it can be done in the ordinary gas or wood stove oven. Sterilize jars as usual for cold pack canning. Fill with fruit or vegetables and syrup or hot water. Leave the screw-top covers a little loose and place one clamp on dishpan of boiling water and keep the oven very moderate (300 degrees Fahrenheit if possible) for the time given. Seal at once and invert to cool, except economy jars leave upright. It is very important to leave the liquid at least one-half inch from the top.

Oven-canned pears are especially fine flavored if the lids are left off until fruit is tender, then fill jars with hot syrup and seal.

The open kettle method for both peaches and pears seems to be returning in favor, or partly cook, then finish in the jars.

Until I hear from you next week do use as many raw vegetables as possible.

Cut tomatoes in chunky pieces into a bowl. Add just enough salt and sugar for seasoning. Let stand a few minutes and pass around in the big bowl. Try raw sugar for health and a distinct change in flavor.

Serve crisp cucumbers right from the garden. Peel and cut into lengthwise strips and serve as you would celery. They are valuable additions to the diet in this way, but after slicing into salt water and covering with vinegar become not only less attractive but may be even harmful.

A salad of grated carrots, chopped crisp spinach and cauliflower, seasoned with a little lemon juice (or vinegar), salt, sugar and oil is both attractive to the eye and peppy to the appetite.
