KINTON

By Mrs. E. L. Cox

The Misses Mableanna Gembella and Evelyn Richards spent Tuesday in Portland.

Mrs. Sarah VanKleeck of Hiteon was a guest Friday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Aten.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Wilson attended the Free Methodist camp meeting Sunday, near Portland.

Rev. W. E. Simpson, pastor of the Kinton church was in town Wednesday, calling on some of his parishioners.

Kenneth and Douglas Taylor and Robert Denney of Beaverton were visitors last Monday at the Floya Bierly home.

Mrs. Lilly M. Bierly and daughter, Mrs. Ethel McCormick and daughters were transacting business in Hillsboro, Saturday.

The 4-H cooking club, Mrs. Mable VanKleeck leader, held an enjoyable meeting Thursday afternoon at the home of Miss Lois Bierly.

Mrs. Luella Glasberg and six sons from Puget Island, Wash., spent a few days during the past week with her sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Wright.

The regular monthly meeting of Kinton grange will be held at the hall Wednesday evening, August 1, at 8 o'clock. All grangers are welcome to attend.

Mrs. J. H. Aten entertained members of the Carlton P.N.G. club, and other invited guests at her home Friday. A pot-luck luncheon was served at noon.

Mr. and Mrs. George Snider of Ione, Oregon, arrived at the home of Mr. Snider's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Snider, Saturday evening, for a short visit.

Members of the 4-H calf club with their leader, Leland Flint, went to Beaverton Wednesday evening, to see the moving picture show, "King of the Horses".

tively straight, long enough and not too large for even with the best of equipment it is quite a knack to bring a log up eight or ten feet from the ground and place it as a component part of a building.

All the men in that section yielded to Old Frank when it came to hewing out the corner, where the logs overlap one another. He could not chop so much cordwood in a day or cut down a tree so quickly, but when it came to laying the corner of a log house he was easily the winner. The sleepers were all hewed out as were the beams, the collar-beams and the rafters. The floors were split out of pine, the shingles were shaved down smooth with a draw-knife, an implement that is seldom seen anymore, even in the kits of the carpenter with a very full set of tools.

The three families were no more than moved to the house built for Old Frank than the three men had to go "outside" to work in the harvest fields, this time of Illinois. With the farmer folks of that section even till quite recently it was the fashion to follow the seasonal occupations, the men from the woods would trek to the wheat fields of the Northwest to work in the harvest and the farmers of the corn belt would come up into the North Woods to "haul logs" or wood, or do other work in the lumber camps.

We heard little as children of that summer spent by the three families in that little cabin in the big woods. Whether they were troubled by Indians, whether they went to bed hungry, what sort of food they gathered from the forest, I do not know. There was no death in the group. There was Charley and Myron Taylor, sons of George; there were Orin, John and Will, Frank's sons, and Rilla, Allie, and Mathilda, Frank's daughters; and Arvilla and Estelle of the Hulet girls. These children were too small to realize much of what was going on, though I've heard one or two remarks about how much Myron cried, or Orin getting lost for a night, and a few other incidents. Mother quite often spoke of the difficulty of getting water which had to be carried in wooden pails from Harrison's spring, a distance of more than a mile. She took her two children and with them on her back she managed some way to bring from the spring two pails of water carrying the little ones hanging on in some way for her hands were occupied with the full pails of the precious fluid.

The Indians must have been friendly for the path to the spring ran right past one of their camp grounds. I remember it well, though there were no Indians ever camped there after I got old enough to remember them though I've seen them on the Indian Trail that passed between the home Father later built and Old Frank's house, where they all stayed that summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Anicker and family attended the grange meeting held at Cedar Mills Saturday evening and witnessed the exemplification of the third and fourth degrees, put on by Leedy grange.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Sparks and son Clement of Portland spent Saturday with Mr. Sparks' sister, Mrs. Madge Pomeroy. Miss Kathryn Pomeroy made the return trip to Portland where she made a short visit.

The master of Kinton grange and Mrs. Streiff, and a class of candidates attended the regular meeting of Leedy grange, Cedar Mills, Saturday evening. The degree staff of Leedy put on the third and fourth degrees.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Ludwig, who have been in the hospital since their bad automobile accident a while ago, were able to be brought home last week. They are improving slowly, but Mr. Ludwig will be in bed for some time yet.

Mrs. Clara Ryan and daughter Miss Alice returned to their home in Portland last week Saturday. They were accompanied by Miss Rosemary Aten, who made a few days visit at the Ryan home. Mrs. Ryan and daughter were guests for about a week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Aten.

Members of the George Snider family including their son George and wife of Ione, Or., and Mrs. Leland Flint, and their daughters who reside in Portland, met together at the coast Sunday, where Mr. and Mrs. George Snider and Miss Eunice Snider have been spending the past week or so, and enjoyed a family picnic.

The annual picnic of Kinton grange will be held at Elmer's park, Sunday, August 12. All attending are requested to bring basket lunch and dishes. Coffee will be furnished by the grange. After dinner there will be a program, with Senator Peter Zimmerman of Yamhill county as a speaker. The public is invited to attend.

On Oregon Farms

St. Helens—The value of Western Rye grass as an emergency crop that will make hay the same year it is planted has been demonstrated in Columbia county where considerable of it was planted this spring after the winter floods and excellent results are being obtained, according to George A. Nelson, county agent. On the Herman Mann farm at Midland Western Rye was planted the first of April and was ready to cut 80 days later. It will undoubtedly produce two and three tons per acre, Mr. Nelson said.

Bend—Believing that head lettuce for fall markets may be established as a profitable cash crop in Deschutes county, a number of farmers are cooperating with County Agent Gus Hagglund in trials to obtain comparisons on time of planting and soil fertilization. The Deschutes climate, with its cool summer nights, is said to be decidedly favorable for the production of a September lettuce crop, and it is believed that there is sufficient market in the month of September to warrant such a project, Mr. Hagglund says. Eight varieties and strains of the best certified lettuce seed obtainable are being grown as practical demonstrations on the farms of Rasmus Petersen, Carl Bloomberg and J. L. Metts, all of Redmond.

Corvallis—Damage by squash

A Different Vegetable Every Day Will Drive Monotony Away!

Vary your vegetables! Don't "string-bean" or "potato" your family into a state of utter boredom. Don't let their professed fondness for a certain vegetable keep you from investigating the goodness of others. You have the whole market to choose from, a whole summer gardenful of selections, so let your fancy roam.

Some adventurous souls refrain from serving the vegetable of their own individual choice because some member of the family snubs it. Others have a preconceived antipathy to certain legumes. To overcome these objections, practice a little deceit and prepare the despised vegetable in a new way. The famished family will be fooled, but finicky no longer!

Spinach Again?
Spinach is a sticking point in some families. The traditional hard-cooked egg helps, and segments of grapefruit give it new flavor. New-est perhaps is spinach salad, disguised with a cheese and egg dressing. To make it (you can use left over spinach if you like) use a cup of cooked spinach. Marinate it well in a mixture of vinegar, salad oil, salt and pepper. Sift the yolks of four hard cooked eggs and grate Neufchatel cheese. Drain the spinach, mix with the cheese and sprinkle the egg yolk on top. Serve as salad.

A New Kind of Vegetable
A new vegetable that is not a vegetable at all but a fruit is our old friend, the banana! This good goody, is delicious baked, fried, broiled, or glazed, and will accompany the meat or serve as an entrée in fine style. To broil bananas, simply peel and place them under the broiler for the last few minutes while the meat is cooking. To fry them, peel the banana, cut in halves crosswise or in quarters. Then fry in very deep fat (heated to 395° F.) 4 to 6 minutes or until light brown. Dip bananas in egg white, roll in sifted dry bread crumbs or in rolled corn flake crumbs and fry. If you prefer, simply saute them (plain or dipped in butter) in a pan, on both bugs has been reported to the O. S. C. experiment station here from southern Oregon, the Willamette Valley and the vicinity of Ontario this year, according to Dr. Don C. Mote, entomologist, and in past years considerable damage has been done by this pest along the upper Columbia river territory near Hermiston. The squash bug differs from most of the large insects that infest gardens Dr. Mote says, in that it has piercing mouth parts and sucks the juice of plants feeding extensively on gourds, melons, pumpkins and squash. They have also been found in enormous quantities on the so-called "Man in the ground." Because of their sucking habits they can be killed only by contact sprays, and recent tests indicate that the pyrethrum spray known as Pyroclide 20, applied according to directions on the can, will kill the insects when applied to them. Several pyrethrum sprays are on the market under various commercial names, such as Evergreen 20, Red Arrow and others. Evergreen 20 is said to have the same toxic constituents as Pyroclide 20 which was used in the tests.

"Nerves" "NERVES" "Nerves"

Dr. Miles NERVINE
"Did the work"
says
Miss Glivar
WHY DON'T YOU TRY IT?

After more than three months of suffering from a nervous ailment, Miss Glivar used Dr. Miles Nerveine which gave her such splendid results that she wrote us an enthusiastic letter.

If you suffer from "Nerves," if you lie awake nights, start at sudden noises, tire easily, are cranky, blue and fidgety, your nerves are probably out of order.

Quiet and relax them with the same medicine that "did the work" for this Colorado girl. Whether your "Nerves" have troubled you for hours or for years, you'll find this time-tested remedy effective.

Candied Vegetables Too
"Glazed" or "glace" vegetables are different enough to be greeted with glee. Carrots, parsnips, and sweet potatoes lend themselves to this method especially well, and some people like candied turnips. Peel your vegetable, cook until tender in boiling salted water. Remove from the fire, drain and lay thick slices in a casserole. Spread thickly with butter and dark corn syrup (half cup syrup to one tablespoon of butter is enough for six large slices). Bake until tender, basting often. Add water if syrup gets too thick.

Cauliflower and Eggplant
Cauliflower is much more popular when it's scalloped. Cook the flowerettes in salted boiling water until tender and drain. Then oil a baking dish and put a layer of cauliflower in it, then a layer of sliced hard-cooked eggs, then a layer of white sauce. Top with crumbs and bake in a hot oven until brown. Use cheese instead of egg-slices if you wish.

The royal purple eggplant is ambrosia to some, but to encourage those lukewarm on the subject, try it this way:

Stuffed Eggplant
Cook egg plant fifteen minutes in boiling water to cover. Cut slice from the top and with a spoon remove the pulp. Chop pulp and add one cup of soft stale bread crumbs. In a pan heat some fat and cook in it a tablespoon of finely chopped onion for 2 minutes. Add the eggplant pulp; season with salt and pepper and moisten with a little water if necessary. Fill eggplant with this mixture and cover with browned crumbs. Bake twenty-five minutes in a hot oven, 450° F. 6 portions.

A Versatile Vegetable Plate
A whole meal-in-one is the vegetable plate, but it has to be different to tempt the finicky. Here's a combination that is new and delightful: Poach an egg and serve it on toast. With it serve buttered beets and string beans. As a crowning touch, serve one broiled banana, to "top it off" and make it new. To broil bananas, peel, brush with butter and broil on rack or in pan until tender and brown.
