COMPLIANCE CERTIFICATES NOW ON WAY

Wheat allotment compliance certificates for Washington county are on their way to the wheat administration at Washington, D. C. The survey and check-up of farms in this county indicated a very evident willingness and intention to comply with the terms of the wheat allotment contracts.

There were practically no instances of contract signers trying to evade their obligations under the contract they signed to reduce their wheat acreage for 1934 and 1935.

These compliance certificates must reach Washington, D.C., and be checked by the wheat administration there before the second half of the 1934 payment is made. Just how long this will be a matter of guess on the part of any one here. It is certain that these compliance forms are being received in Washington, D.C., at this time from all over the United States. Consequently, it is not unreasonable to assume that it may be some little time before the money is received here.

No definite word is yet available concerning the status of the hog reduction contracts for this county. We only know that at the request of the hog administration, Washington, D.C., these contracts were turned over to the committee in charge of people from outside the state, and that this committee is going over the contracts from this county along with those from other counties in the state, and classifying hogs claimed in the application according to the quality of the evidence supporting the claim. Just when this work will be completed and what the result will be no one in the county is able to know at this time.

On Oregon Farms

Canyon City—A calf-dehorning trial made on the Oliver Brothers ranch this spring by the use of a dehorning paste appears very successful, according to a recent report made to R. G. Johnson, county agent, by Herman Oliver. Approximately 400 head of calves were treated and not a single case of "sore-head" has developed, according to Mr. Oliver.

Albany—The effectiveness of codling moth tree bands in controlling this fruit pest is being tried out in Linn county by O. E. Mikesell, emergency agricultural assistant agent, in co-operation with several farmers. Six bands have been placed on five trees in the K. Wada orchard at Brownsville, and nine have been placed on five trees in the F. M. French apple orchard west of Albany.

Roseburg—Die-back and yellowing of leaves in prune trees in numerous Douglas county orchards is attributed by Roland Parker, county agent, chiefly to lack of moisture. With the continued shortage of normal rainfall the condition is becoming more severe each year, Mr. Parker says. Some growers are endeavoring to correct the condition by removing every other tree in their orchards, while intense interest in the establishment of irrigation plants is being shown by those with water available.

Dallas—Prune growers in Polk county are being advised by County Agent J. R. Beck to delay putting on "pari-di," for prune root borers until after harvesting is completed. Prune picking started so much earlier this year than usual that picking of the fruit and normal time for applying the "pari-di" came almost at the same time.

Albany—One of the most successful general-purpose irrigation projects in Linn county is that on the A. Frombers farm at Lebanon, says F. C. Mullen, county agent. Mr. Frombers has 9 acres of Ladino clover, 5 acres of loganberries, 3 acres of potatoes, 3 acres of peaches, 6 acres of alfalfa and 2 acres of miscellaneous truck crops under irrigation. He feels that the benefits he is deriving from irrigation this year will practically pay for his entire installation.

Corvallis—Hairy vetch proved to be one of the most successful crops in south Benton county this year, with H. C. Herron and Tom Carpenter reporting yields running about 300 pounds to the acre. This crop is extensively used in southwestern United States for green manure purposes, and the price of seed at present is about 7 1/2 cents a pound. Mr. Herron believes it makes a much better cash crop than wheat or other cereals and plans to grow an acreage of it again next year.

Dallas—The Hessian fly, which decreased the yield of wheat in Polk county, and elsewhere, from 5 to 10 bushels an acre this year can be controlled by good farming, says J. R. Beck, county agent. The fly passes through two life cycles a year, he says, hatching out in time to attack the spring wheat and then lying dormant until the young wheat is up in the fall. Many larva are never reached by burning stubble or pasturing after harvest. The best method is plow under all wheat stubble as soon as the ground is ready for plowing, and work it down to a good seed bed so that the larva cannot work its way out, Mr. Beck says. Wherever possible all volunteer wheat should be destroyed by disking or plowing, and if possible avoid planting wheat back on ground that was in wheat this year. As the fall brood of the Hessian fly usually gets its egg-laying done before October 15, Mr. Beck recommends planting between that date and November 1. It is risky to wait to plant spring wheat he says, as lots of larva may live over and wipe out spring plantings.

Power

Foot-power: You need that today, just as the early Christians who went everywhere preaching the Gospel—the Good News that "God had a Son and He died for your sins." The big blessing comes when you hunt out the one who never hears.

Head-power. Use what head-power you have and with it take on all the Bible you can. "My word shall not return unto me void," says God. Of the Scriptures, Christ said, "These are they that speak of Me," "and I if I be lifted up from the earth will draw all men unto Me." Use your head-power; show Him lifted up, crucified, punished for sin. The one place where the Holy God meets sinful man.

Heart-power. Just sounding brass and clanging cymbal unless you have it. Breaks Him down when He senses it that you are driven by an overflow from that boundless reservoir of love, the heart of God. "For God so loved the world that He gave His Son to die for our sins."

Knee-power: That brings in all these and what other powers you need, to become a fruitful branch. Haven't the courage to foot it out and tell the Good News? Use your knee-power. Haven't the know-how? Knee-power again. Nor the heart? Then more knee-power. "Herein is my father glorified, that you bear much fruit; so shall you be my disciples," says our Lord. George N. Taylor, Beaverton, Ore. adv.
