The First Grade has started to read "Round the Year First Reader" and are doing very nicely.

The Fifth Grade in its Journey Geography, has started a tour of the Western States, and find the little trip very interesting as there is always something new on the way.

In Arithmetic these pupils have completed the addition and subtraction of fractions. Now they are starting to multiply and divide fractions.

The Sixth Grade pupils were very sorry to hear that Earl Drorbaugh has the mumps, and wish him a speedy recovery.

The Eighth Grade has 20 perfect days, which entitle them to a half-holiday.

MANY CHANGES SEEN IN FORTY YEARS

One of the Banner's readers who can remember clearly conditions that existed forty years ago, has sent us the following communication, which we think will interest our readers:

"You can't help but wonder if there will be as much change in the next forty years as there has been in the past forty. Forty years ago women wore bustles, petticoats, corsets, high buttoned shoes, ruffled drawers, flannel nightgowns, puffs in their hair, knew nothing about a makeup, did their own cooking, baking, washing, cleaning, went to church every Sunday, were so busy raising a family they did not even have time to get sick. Men wore whiskers, flat topped hats, wore big blue ties, three buttoned vests, red flannel underwear, big watches and chains, chopped wood for stoves took a bath once a week in the summer time, smoked three for a nickel cigars, drank ten cent whiskey, five cent beer, rode horses, buggies and bicycles, fought over politics, worked from twelve to twenty hours a day and lived until they were ready to die. The store keepers burned coal oil lamps, wood stoves, carried everything from needles to threshing machines, trusted everybody, never took an inventory, placed orders for goods a year in advance, always had time for a good story, enjoyed life, and made money.

"In this day and age, if women wear stockings they are silk, low shoes, no corsets, about an ounce of underwear, bob their hair, paint, powder, play bridge, drink cocktails, drive automobiles, keep a pet dog and go in for politics. Men have high blood pressure, nervous breakdowns, wear no hats, many of them no hair, shave their whiskers, shoot golf, bathe twice a day, drink anything, play the stock market, commit suicide, ride in airplanes, never go to bed the same day they get up, are misunderstood at home, work four or five hours, play the rest of the day and die before they realize they have grown to manhood. The stores have electric lights, cash registers, elevators, seldom have what the customer wants, trust nobody, take inventory every evening, never buy in advance, have advertising experts, expert decorators, efficiency experts, ushers and doorkeepers, a clerk for every counter and never make a dime.

Yours truly, Desert Dusty.

KRAUS DISCUSSES PROPOSED TAX BILL

In discussing the proposed "County School Equalization" bill, Saturday night during a Washington County Tax Equalization league meeting at Hillsboro, O. B. Kraus, county school superintendent said that a tax levy of 1 1/4 mills under the proposed measure would provide approximately $800 per teacher in county grade schools when added to existing state, elementary and county school funds.

TEMPERATURE IS RETURNED TO NORMAL

After having a real taste of winter it seems rather pleasant to see the return of our normal temperature.

The first snowfall in two years started in on Thursday of last week and for 4 days we had real winter weather. Sunday was very cold and the snow fell heavily all during the day. Late in the evening, a "Chinook" wind sent the temperature up to normal. By Monday night the snow was all gone. Today the weather is so warm one scarcely needs a fire.

Canners' School Is To Be Given At Oregon State College

The forty-second annual meeting of the Oregon Dairymen's association will be held at McMinnville February 4 and 5 with A. H. Lauterbach, chief of the dairy section of the AAA as one of the principal speakers. Arrangements for Mr. Lauterbach to address the convention were made by Roger Morse, secretary of the association and extension dairyman at O. S. C., after it was found possible to shift the tentative dates of the convention a few days to correspond with the dairy chief's schedule.

The complete program for the session has not yet been announced but it is known that Mr. Lauterbach will speak on Tuesday afternoon and again at the annual banquet Tuesday evening.

The national visitor is a dairy farmer himself, with wide experience in managing co-operative associations. When he was induced to take his present position he was serving as manager of the Wisconsin Cooperative Cheese Producers association.

Supports 13 in Family and Buys Home With Portion of His $3-a-Day Income

How to support a family of thirteen and buy a home on $3 a day involves just three principles, says Joseph Flores, Colorado Springs, Colo., who is winning nation-wide newspaper notice for his accomplishment.

"First, you get a good wife; second, you work like hell, and third, everybody must love everybody else in the family," he said. Each month he gives half of his wages to his wife for food. The family has meat three times a week. With his half of the income, Flores keeps up insurance, pays doctor bills and others, takes the family to a movie now and then and buys one newspaper a week. His wife makes over the older children's clothes for the others.

Flores recently finished buying a home, also out of his income. He purchased a washing machine, one of the higher-priced ones, on installments of $5.00 a month to solve the big cleanliness problem in his home. When the American Washing Machine Manufacturers' association learned of his purchase, and that two payments remained due, it sent him the money in recognition of his foresight and ability in managing his small budget.

"Mr. Flores thus demonstrated that even families of extremely limited income can manage the purchase of a washer," commented Secretary J. R. Bohnen in Chicago. "In fact, it ranked next in importance to his house and his insurance."

SOME EMOTIONS HAVE HARMFUL RESULTS

Like the germ which causes the common cold, like the identification of what is the true nature of electricity, exact knowledge of "nervous" disorders has so far eluded the scientific investigator. On the other hand, more is being learned all the time about these maladies, which might be said to range from extremely noticeable eccentricities to violent insanity. The great mass of such troubles is bound up with activity of the emotions. This is the latest field into which physicians are pressing their way. First in history came the treatment of wounds which were frequent among early men and which could readily be seen. This gave rise to surgery. Next in order was study of internal conditions, leading to chemistry and developing into medicine. Third we have the present development of the science psychology, which is finding more and more of its application in the work of the physician. The quack, too, is busy here, with many unscientific doctrines, such as Coueism, faith-healing, some forms of psychoanalysis and many other "thought cults" offered to the public.

Man as constituted today is in many respects a victim of his past. He has a multitude of characteristics developed to meet the demands of life long ago, but in numerous cases, useless under modern conditions and sometimes positively harmful.

Anger and fear, which are the most typically strong emotions, were connected in their origin with the preservation of life through fighting or fleeing. In these emotions—or rather in the inner bodily activities which result in the mind-feelings that we may roughly call such emotions—preparation is made for enormous physical activity. Digestion is stopped, circulation of the blood is speeded up, and sugar is supplied to the muscles in large quantities to give energy for the added exertion. But in modern life the episode begins and ends without the exertion for which preparation is made. This has various injurious effects.

Thus man might be compared to a model 1900 automobile trying to operate under high speed traffic conditions of 1935, with much dissatisfaction manifesting itself naturally. He has a mental and emotional equipment scarcely different from that of his ancestors 20,000 years ago. One can take some encouragement, however, because there are other emotions, such as mirth and joy which are beneficial, in that they further digestion and other life processes useful today. Laughter and smiling are distinctly known to accompany good health. Some individuals are inclined to the helpful kind of emotions and some to the injurious kind. A present-while awaiting more facts from the investigators—the best thing which can be said to the individual whose balance is tipped is: the least useful direction is that he should be on his guard and discipline his emotions by applying himself to things which start more beneficial feelings.

COUNTY RECREATION SCHOOL TO BE HELD

Community organization leaders of Washington County are interested in the recreation school to be held in Hillsboro, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, January 28, 29, and 30. These meetings will be held in the Hillsboro Grange Hall beginning at 8:00 p.m. each evening under the direction of Miss Gertrude Skow, representing the National Recreation Association.

Community group entertainment of all kinds and descriptions will be demonstrated with the cooperation of the people attending. One of these schools was held at Hillsboro last year and proved very popular. Those people intending to attend should make plans to be present all three evenings as the program is progressive.

THOSE INTERESTED IN COW TESTING TO MEET

For the past three years cow testing association work has been carried on in Washington County in cooperation with Yamhill County dairymen. As far as is known at this time this will be continued, but there is a prospect of extending the work in this county and it is for the purpose of going into the details of this that those people interested are asked to meet next Tuesday afternoon, says W. F. Cyrus, County Agent.
