BASKETBALL TEAM TO MEET HILLSBORO

Basketball holds the center of the sport page at present. Beaverton goes to Hillsboro tonight to meet their sharpshooters.

Last Friday evening Hillsboro took Tigard into camp to the tune of 24 to 15, while Beaverton, in an overtime game got away with the Forest Grove scalp, 27-25. Forest Grove is rated much higher than is Tigard on the floor but how the locals will fare on their opponents' floor is a big question. However, that the Beavertonians will give a good account of themselves is certain for in the pre-season games they were able to pile up an unbelievable lead in the total score, against their opponents.

College Man Proves God

"This college is certainly a place of miracles," writes the man. "There is hardly a student prayer-meeting in which some one does not testify to the actual experience of being absolutely penniless and of having the need met through sudden notification of a job or of money coming from somewhere."

"Witness my own case. One night as I listened to some of the testimonies it seemed to me that God was taking care of everyone but me. So I asked him for some definite thing on which I could build my faith. And the prayer was certainly answered. I had hardly stepped inside the house when I was told that someone had called up several times. It turned out to be a job for Friday. As soon as I was through talking to the woman our landlady asked if I could wash her windows. And so I was completely loaded with work on the week-end, to the extent that I had to skip some of my studying."

Here in a college surcharged with zeal for the Christ of Calvary, are nine hundred students of whom one-third go out into whole time Christian service. Into the pulpit, into the home and foreign fields, they go; men and women who believe the Book word for word and who prove God by prayer again and again. Blessed are they to whom they go with their testimony as to the faithfulness of God to His promises.

"If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you."—Christ's prayer promise.

COLLECTIVE BARGAINING IN THE STEEL INDUSTRY

EDITOR'S NOTE: Recent strike threats by union leaders in the steel industry have received a great deal of public attention recently. It has been alleged that the steel employers have refused to bargain collectively with their employees but this is categorically denied by the operators. The following article is the fifth of a series prepared by the American Iron and Steel Institute to explain the steel industry's position on this vital question.

PART V. INDIVIDUAL OPPORTUNITY

"Union labor" desires to bring all employees to the same level, independent of ability, energy or initiative. It inevitably discriminates against superior workmen. It demands that promotion be made on the basis of seniority instead of upon the basis of reliability, originality or merit.

The employee representation plan gives free play to individualism, encourages the use of the incentive system, permits recognition of superior ability, and offers employees opportunity for advancement based upon capacity for leadership, proven intelligence, production efficiency, and the like.

"Union labor" deliberately strives to prevent men from broadening their experience or increasing their usefulness. It allows no man to do any form of work except that which falls under his own particular trade classification, and establishes iron-clad barriers between activities of allied crafts. This system presents almost insurmountable difficulties, both in production programs and in expense involved, and epitomizes the unprogressive and narrow-minded attitude of the leaders of "union labor" with respect to the advancement of the very men whom they presume to represent.

"Union labor" by erecting and maintaining a barrier between management and employees, strives deliberately to prevent employees from obtaining a reasonable understanding of the production and financial problems of the companies for whom they work.

At the present time, when business in general and the steel industry in particular is desperately striving to maintain the broadened employment and the new wage levels prescribed by codes under NRA, it is of vital importance that employees be taken into the confidence of management and be told frankly facts and figures having to do with costs and earnings.

A continuous education in matters of this sort is part and parcel of the employee representation plan. Under this plan, employees are furnished unobscuredly with pertinent information concerning the conduct of the business for which they work, so that they can understand the reasoning and the necessity upon which employers' decisions are based.

Lastly—but far from being the least important—the essential qualification for membership in "union labor" is payment of dues.

This is worthy of emphasis. Membership is based not upon intelligence, efficiency, productivity, adaptability, or loyalty to the mutual undertaking in which employee and employer are engaged—simply payment of dues.

Under the employee representation plan no large expenses are involved entailing high dues.

In short, under this plan, management recognizes the right of employees to meet and to elect representatives to bargain collectively, and to consider all problems having to do with employee welfare, as an inherent privilege.
