Tigard, a pioneer; singing of the "Star-Spangled Banner", concluded the program.

Officers for the ensuing year as elected are Adam DeHaan, President, and C. M. McKay, secretary, re-elected.

After the program the large gathering went to the grounds in front of the school house where S. B. Lawrence Jr. took several pictures of the entire group. Mrs. Jensen and five of her pupils (Mrs. E. G. Perkins, Olga Johnson, Pauline West, Mrs. Ruth Anderson, and the former Elizabeth McBroom) also had pictures taken of their group in remembrance of the occasion.

INTEREST IS SHOWN

Sunken Flower Garden Display Will Be One Of The Features

Growing with Oregon will be the theme of the 74th annual Oregon State Fair to be held at the fair grounds at Salem, Saturday, August 31, to Saturday, September 7, inclusive and plans have been underway for some time to make this the most interesting fair for the people of Oregon that they ever have known.

Solon T. White, director of the department of Agriculture and director of the fair, has named Leo Spitzbart, of Polk county, as assistant fair manager.

Interest has already been shown by county groups, commercial exhibitors and race horse owners, and there is great competition among those offering amusements for selection on the program.

Premium lists will be ready for distribution shortly after July 1. The premiums offered equal in money those of last year. Some divisions have been added due to public demand. Those who have already asked for premium lists will receive them as soon as mailing is started and others may obtain them by writing Oregon State Fair, Salem, Oregon.

Buildings and grounds are being put in shape. When money was not available from the emergency fund to repair the buildings needing it, it was decided to make temporary repairs so that the Agricultural Building could be used for the 1935 fair. A sunken flower garden display will be one of the features placed in the Agricultural building.

DANGER IN USE OF NEW FIRECRACKERS

Attention should be called to the danger connected with the use of firecrackers on the Fourth of July. One product known as a bomb, which is about one inch long and 3/4 inch in diameter is claimed to contain 43 grains of explosive. The explosive is not gun powder, but reacts with much greater violence than gun powder. This is over four times the violence of the customary firecracker and the hazard connected with them is much greater.

Parents should properly instruct their children, else there may be many serious accidents and disastrous fire losses.
