Brush Clearing Method Devised
La Grande—H. H. Weatherpoon of Elgin devised a unique way of clearing his orchard of brush after pruning this year. He constructed a slide 10 feet wide with small poles 8 feet long attached in front to resemble the slide of a hay buck. To pull it a crotch chain was run from the back of the slide to a tractor, which was then driven down the rows over the brush. The drag with the pole fingers slid under the brush and the chain helped keep it from sliding off. When loaded it was pulled to the brush pile, the tractor unhooked from the front of the drag, moved around and hooked on behind, and was ready to go after another load. Mr. Weatherpoon reports clearing from 30 to 40 acres of orchard a day with this device.

What I Believe

If you have not settled the big question, look into this—
1. That all have sinned, myself included. Yes.
2. That my best effort to live right will not blot out even one sin. Quite right.
3. That, since I cannot save myself, my sins still stand to rise up against me at the Judgment Day. Quite Right.
4. That Christ was God's Son and He died for my sins. Yes.
5. I now take Him as my Savior who died to save me from God's just wrath at my sins. Yes.
6. Here is God's word for it, that I am saved from now on and forever: "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—John 3:16.

What I Will Do

1. From now on I will search my Bible to learn how to love, trust and obey Him. Yes.
2. And I will look to God in prayer for power to, live the new life. Yes.
3. When I sin I will then and there tell God and accept forgiveness on the ground that Christ paid it all. Yes.
"God commendeth His love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us. Much more then, being now counted righteous by His blood we shall be saved from wrath through Him." See Romans 5:8-9.

A New Sauce For Lamb

By Caroline B. King
Home Economics and Culinary Authority

THERE'S a new sparkle to cook-ery today, a new thrill, a new delight. We, who so long were forced to depend wholly on the good substantial fare of the era, have now awakened to the delectability of flavor—we've learned to combine the usual thing in an unusual manner. We've learned to appreciate the fact that a soupcon of this and a dash of that can so change a seemingly trite dish, or lift from the ordinary a familiar sauce, that it becomes at once a food fit for the very gods themselves.

Take a plain every day roast of lamb, for instance, and you may choose either a choice leg or an inexpensive shoulder or breast, as you will. Cook it carefully as always, serve it hot or cold, but—dress it with a sauce that combines spicy flavors, rich fruit juices, sweetened with sugar, a few thimblefuls of wine, and what have you? Why a dish which might have been prepared for Cleopatra's feasting, or at least for the most critical gourmet of your acquaintance—it's all in the flavor, you see. And this sauce—how to make it—what to put into it—let's be specific as well as imaginative. So here are complete directions —Beat half a glass of current jelly with 4 tablespoons of sugar, add the grated rind of an orange with 2 tablespoons of the orange juice and 2 tablespoons of lemon juice. Whip in ¼ teaspoon salt and a generous dash of paprika, and mix all with 4 tablespoonfuls of the liquid in the roasting pan, first, of course, removing the fat. Heat almost to boiling, then add 3 table-spoons of port or any dark wine you prefer. Serve hot with the hot roast or with broiled lamb chops, and hot also when you slice the remains of the cold lamb for next day's luncheon.
