HOP RESEARCH TO BE CO-ORDINATED

To co-ordinate the efforts of extension and research workers of Oregon State college concerned with the hop growing industry, there has just been appointed by Dean W. A. Schoenfeld of O.S.C. the Hop Investigations and Extension Committee of 1936. G. R. Hoerner, federal investigator stationed at the college, is chairman.

Three definite experimental projects are now in progress dealing with the hop industry, according to Dean Schoenfeld. These are studying of artificial drying methods, the improvement and application of chemical methods in hop evaluation, and hop production cost studies. These are in addition to comprehensive investigations in disease control carried on by the U. S. department of agriculture. The new committee will hold monthly meetings and as part of its work will sponsor radio programs throughout the year. These will be broadcast every Thursday evening at 7:15 o'clock.

Other members of the new committee are G. R. Hyslop, C. E. Owens, E. H. Weigand, R. S. Besse, D. C. Smith, Don C. Mote, F. E. Price, J. S. Jones, G. W. Kuhlman, and Paul Carpenter, all of the college staff.

PINBALL ORDINANCE PASSED BY COUNCIL

Councilmen Carr, Holland, Kossel and Mayor Wilson were present at the Council meeting Monday evening.

An ordinance was passed at the meeting regulating the use of pinball machines, and providing for licenses for the machines.

Fire Chief Williams in his monthly report, said that there were seven calls for the fire department during the month. These included two rural calls, four dwellings, and one miscellaneous. There was $24,300 worth of property at risk, which was covered by $10,700 insurance, but there was no property loss. Fifty-two inspections were made during the month, with the assistance of J. A. Hayes, State Deputy Fire Marshall.

LONELY VIGIL KEPT IN FOREST OUTPOSTS

Antarctic explorers are not the only persons that keep lonely vigil in snowbound fastnesses, it appears from information recently obtained through the U. S. forest service. Caretakers in a few remote forest stations high in the mountains are in many cases cut off for long periods from communication with the outside world.

Such modern "Crusoes" are stationed at points like Big Camas ranger station in the North Umpqua district of Oregon, or at Diamond Lake. Others are at Lake of the Woods in the southern Cascade mountains and on Spirit Lake at the base of Mt. St. Helens on the Columbia national forest of Washington. Winter caretakers also are left at Toll Gate in the Blue Mountains on the Umatilla national forest. These men are charged with the duty of protecting Uncle Sam's property, preventing snow damage where possible, and in other ways assisting in the forest service program.

They lay in stocks of provisions in late fall and literally "hole in" for the winter. In many instances the snow blanket reaches a depth of from 8 to 12 feet and skis or snow shoes become the only means of travel. Observations made by these outposts regarding deer and other wild life often are helpful in determining policies for better game protection. Reports on depth of snow made to the Weather Bureau are of value in forecasting spring floods and water supply for irrigation.

Radio has been a great boon to the solitary lives of these caretakers. Most of them are equipped with the small semi-portable forest service sets which, at scheduled intervals, can contact the outside world over short wave connections. Telephone lines usually are out of commission after the first heavy storms.

At points like Lake of the Woods and Spirit Lake, occasional sking parties from outside break into the routine of these lonely outposts, but in most cases the winter-long visit of the vast white wilderness is undisturbed.

CATTLE FEEDING DAY PLANNED AT O.S.C.

Results of continued study into profitable beef feeding methods for western Oregon will be reported on at the second annual Cattle Feeders' day at Oregon State college on Saturday, February 22. The program, to be under the auspices of the animal industries division of the experiment station, will start at 10 o'clock in the morning with P. H. Brandt, head of the division, as chairman.

Steers fed out this winter will be available for inspection, and B. W. Rodenwald, assistant professor of animal husbandry, who is in charge of the feeding, will explain the method followed for each lot. After this the cattle will be appraised by Claude Steusloff of the Valley Packing company of Salem.

R. G. Johnson, professor of animal husbandry, will discuss the purchase of feeder cattle and D. E. Nebergall, packer of Albany, will speak on the market for high quality beef. O. M. Nelson, professor of animal husbandry, will discuss winter feeding of sheep. The annual bred gilt sale held at the college will be conducted by A. W. Oliver, assistant professor of animal husbandry, at the conclusion of the feeders' day program.

Sunset Over Historic Alamo

A Texas twilight adds softness to this photograph study of the Alamo Mission, historic Texas shrine of Liberty, in the center of San Antonio. Here 189 Texans died to a man, defending the mission in the revolution against Mexico. One hundred years later the Texas Centennial Exposition, opening at Dallas June 6, pays tribute to the Alamo's gallant defenders.

St. Marys To Meet Washington Team

Outstanding Quintet from Seattle College Prep To Play Saints

REMARKABLE RECORD

Two Other Games Are Listed On S.M.'s Week End Schedule

A heavy week-end basketball schedule finds the St. Mary's quintet playing three games, Thursday, the fast Sheridan five invaded the St. Mary's court. Last year these two teams battled to a tie, and the game was won in an overtime period by the Sheridan five. This year the Saints will be out to square up matters. The game has not yet been finished, as we go to press.

Friday night the Catholic Star of the Sea high from Astoria will play on the local court. This is the first meeting of the two teams. Little is known of the Astoria five, but it is rumored that they are going to make a strong bid for the Catholic championship, which will be played in March on the University of Portland floor. This game will be interesting inasmuch as it will give comparative strength before the tourney takes place.

The best game of the week will be held Saturday night when the strong Seattle College Prep school meets the Saints at St. Mary's. This team from Seattle has a remarkable record of twenty-eight straight wins this season. The Seattle papers declare it the strongest team in their city. Word comes from the Seattleites that they have won the Catholic championship of Washington and that they will attempt to topple over the strongest Catholic teams in Oregon in order to represent the Northwest in the National Catholic tourney to be held in Chicago next month.

The Seattle club is coached by Jimmy Logan, former star for Santa Clara. Jimmy states that this team is the best in the history of his coaching, and checking the records of the Seattle High school we find that his teams have always been outstanding in their area.

Though the Saints will go into this game as the under dogs they will give every bit of their strength to down this classy five from the Sound district. A victory over this team would mean much to the Saints.

St. Mary's record, though not as powerful as that of the Seattle Five, is outstanding. They have won eight out of nine games, losing one to Tigard in a Washington county league game. This loss marks the only blemish on their record.

The game will start at eight o'clock.

IN APPRECIATION

Beaverton Volunteer Fire Dept. C. J. Barnes, President

TO CAMPAIGN FOR NEW AMENDMENT

With the formation of The Right to Tell the Truth League, headquarters in the Graphic Arts Building at Portland, announcement is made by Dr. Virgil MacMikie that a campaign will be waged for the so-called Donahue Amendment to be on the ballot during the November election.

Dr. MacMikie said, "The direct simplicity of this amendment shall leave no doubt in the minds of the voters that the issue is clearly between petty tyranny and the people's interest. The amendment merely provides that no state governing body shall ever limit or inhibit honest, truthful advertising. There has been a constant effort on the part of special interests endeavoring to forbid advertising. The people have the right to be informed through educational, honest, truthful advertising and no legislature or board should be allowed to abrogate this right."

FIRE DEPARTMENT GIVE DEMONSTRATION

Artificial respiration was the main topic at the regular Wednesday night meeting of the first aid class in the high school this week. The boys from the Beaverton fire department put on a demonstration which was well worth seeing. This is one of the most important subjects in first aid as every one should know how to give artificial respiration when the emergency arises, as in cases of drowning or asphyxia from gas fumes. A demonstration by the fire boys will be put on every Wednesday evening for the remainder of the course, which will continue for 5 more weeks, when examinations, both written and practical, will be held.

Hugh Lewis To Open New Business

International Harvester Co. Products, Trucks, Farm Implements to be Sold

ERICKSON BLDG. USED

Property on Front Street Is Being Remodeled by Workmen

Workmen have been busy the past week remodeling and repairing the property on Front St. formerly belonging to Otto Erickson where for a number of years he conducted a garage and farm implement business.

The equipment has been purchased by H. Lewis and Co., who have also taken a lease on the building, and will open an International Harvester Co. agency, and maintain a truck, tractor, and farm implement business.

Hugh Lewis came to America in 1909 and spent about a year and a half in New York City. He then came to Portland where he was employed at various occupations until 1919 when he came to Beaverton and took over the livery transfer business then conducted by Stoud and son. The business was known as the Beaverton Transfer. They had autos for hire and did general delivery business.

About 1926 he and his brother James purchased the Beaverton Lumber Co. About 1930 the lumber company was sold to Willard Jackson, and the Lewis Bros. maintained what was known as the Beaverton Sand and Gravel Co. which, after his brother James withdrew, Hugh has conducted until the present time.

The new firm will be known as Hugh Lewis and Co. They will handle International Harvester Co. machines and farm implements with special attention given to trucks, tractors, and other agricultural equipment.

The equipment of the place was purchased from the trustee in bankruptcy.

"FREE LOT" SCHEMES BEING OPERATED

"Winning a lot may mean losing a lot," says a warning issued by the Portland Better Business Bureau, "especially when the building lot you have won is a narrow-chested 20-foot wide lot in an undesirable location in a new and undeveloped subdivision."

The Bureau report indicates that these "free lot" rackets have recently become active again in Oregon, and states that promotions of this character have been investigated in the past and it has been ascertained that there is always some catch to the supposedly free offer.

According to the report, promoters usually obtain the names of prospects by handing out cards at large public gatherings, advertising, of course, that a drawing is to be held and prizes offered. Ordinarily all who turn in cards are notified that they have "won", but when they visit the property they find that the lot they have been awarded is only 18 to 20 feet wide and is in an undesirable location in the subdivision. When the winner indicates that he is not satisfied with the lot the salesman offers to trade him a lot in the "restricted district". This second piece of property will probably be found to be more satisfactory, but it is then explained by the promoter that because of restrictions it is impossible to let anyone have a lot in that district less than fifty feet wide, so it is necessary for the "winner" to buy an additional 25 feet of property for from $360 to $500 in order to secure his "prize". When the victim realizes what has happened he finds that he has paid a substantial price for a piece of property he probably would not have purchased under ordinary circumstances.
