POTATO ACREAGE MAY BE SMALL

A decrease in late potato acreage for 1936 as compared with last year is in prospect, according to the best information available, it is announced in the current Agricultural Situation and Outlook report issued by the Oregon State College Extension service.

If food prices and domestic demand remain at least at present levels, potato prices may be expected to be higher than for the two previous crops. If the indicated reduction takes place, early potato growers are also expected to plant an acreage somewhat below average. Stocks of old potatoes are much smaller than a year ago in the country as a whole, and probably below average.

Fluctuating yields, as well as changes in acreage have large bearing on the final potato crop from year to year, the report points out. Some observers believe that plantings of late potatoes in 1936 may be as much as 10 per cent below the 1935 level, but production cannot be forecast reliably this early.

Unless unfavorable weather and disease interfere, a large increase in number of turkeys to be grown is in prospect this season, the report continues. The number of hens retained in the country for egg production is unusually large, and turkey hatcheries are experiencing heavy demand. In considering prospective prices for turkeys, however, other factors must be taken into consideration, such as buying power of consumers, prices of competing meats, and the manner by which the turkey crop is distributed and marketed.

The general level of farm prices in Oregon has shown little change in the past three months. It stands at about 72 per cent of the 1926-30 average. In the country as a whole, the latest government index of prices received by farmers stood at 109 per cent of the pre-war average, inasmuch as the index of prices paid by farmers, together with interest and taxes, was much higher.

New Deal Cost $1,250 a Family

More to Come, Says House Minority Leader; Raps Extravagance.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The Roosevelt administration will have spent 32 billion, 675 million dollars by the time this congress adjourns, Bertrand Snell, representative from New York, told the house during the debate on the 803 million dollar tax bill.

"This means that the New Deal will have to take $1,250 from every family in the United States," he said. "And the money has been spent in a wasteful, extravagant manner," he added.

Ridicules Financial Progress. Citing the mounting deficits, Snell said:

"Three times we have been told in the President's budget messages no new taxes would be required, and in each instance we have been called upon later in the same session to pass a new tax bill. "All this proves beyond doubt that the administration does not have the slightest semblance of a financial program. Its nearest approach to a budget policy is to spend all the money it can gather in or borrow, in as many ways as possible."

Carry Issue to People. Minority leaders decided to carry to the people at the November elections the issues raised by the President's new "corporation surplus" tax bill.

"It is a question to put squarely before the people," Snell declared. "If the people decide that thrift in business and saving for a rainy day is bad policy then they can endorse the new taxes by their votes. I am confident that they will conclude otherwise."

Reveal Wallace Employee Reaped Cotton Profits

Washington.—Outstanding among the beneficiaries of the AAA cotton payments has been a $5,000,000 British controlled cotton-growing concern, whose $42,000-a-year president was also one of the ranking officials of the Agricultural Adjustment administration. It was revealed here when the publication of the names of recipients of AAA payments in excess of $10,000 were demanded from Secretary Wallace.

Oscar Johnston, president of the Delta & Pine Land Co. of Scott, Miss., which is controlled by the Fine Spinners and Doublers association of Manchester, England, is also manager of the federal cotton pool. He is also a director and vice president of the Commodity Credit corporation.

Johnston's cotton-raising firm, it was revealed, has benefited from federal loans up to $84,000, and has received $177,947 for not raising cotton.

1 in 10 Gets U. S. Pay. Washington.—More than 12,500,000 persons are now receiving checks from the federal government. That is about 1 in 10 of America's 120,000,000 citizens. The house ways and means committee has admitted that another huge tax bill will be necessary in 1937.

O.S.C. STUDIES ROOT WEEVIL HABITS

Strawberry root weevils, those insidious pests of one of Oregon's most valuable berry crops, have long been the subject of intensive research by the entomologists of the Oregon State college experiment station. After hunting down the weevils in their hiding places, cataloging the six species found to be active in Oregon, and learning all about their life habits, the entomologists have now published results of their research in the form of two bulletins just off the press.

Of chief current interest to Oregon growers is a brief illustrated bulletin designated as Station Circular 115, "Strawberry Root-Weevil Control in Oregon," by Dr. Don C. Mote. It explains the method of mixing and applying the poison baits which have been found most practical in the control of these pests.

The time of application for the most common species in most parts of Oregon is about the middle of the harvest season, the exact time depending on local conditions. In some sections two applications are necessary for the control of the common weevils—the first one coming about the middle of May or when the berries are in full bloom.

Bait for the native species, which include the decorated, Lacombe and western strawberry root weevils, is applied earlier, usually about April 1 when the adults are actively feeding on foliage.

The comprehensive results of the research have been published in the form of a 110-page station bulletin No. 330, entitled, "The Root-Weevils Injurious to Strawberries in Oregon," by J. Wilcox, Don C. Mote and Leroy Childs. This is believed to be the most complete report on the subject now in print, and contains, in addition to the reports on the extensive research carried on in Oregon, a bibliography of 225 references to other published material on these pests.

Cultural practices have been an important aid in the control of the pests, although in recent years the use of poison baits of two types, one using apple waste and the other bran as a base,
