Beavers And Tigard In Tie For First

Beaver High Wins From Hillsboro Squad By A Score of 33-18

TEAM WINS TWELVE

Players To Participate in Tournament at Linfield College

Playing before the largest basketball crowd ever gathered in Beaverton, and by far the greatest in the Washington-Columbia league the entire season, Beaverton High School Beavers soundly defeated the Hillsboro High squad last Friday evening by a score of 33 to 18. Every seat and all standing room was taken by an enthusiastic crowd which saw Beaverton take an early lead and continue it throughout the game. Beaverton played a hard driving fast breaking game that had the Hillsboro cagers bewildered most of the game.

Beaverton now enters the district number 6 play-off at Linfield college, March 4, 5, 6. Teams competing there are Tillamook, McMinnville, Newberg, Monmouth, Beaverton, Tigard, Woodburn and Dallas, or Silverton. The team winning 3 games enters the state tournament at Salem March 17th. McMinnville has been favored by sports writers as the team likely to win but Beaverton will be stiff opposition.

Beaverton has now closed its regular season with 12 wins against 5 defeats in the newly organized league. Boys entering the tournament include Captain Charles West, Jay Gibson, Gene Brown, Loris Bixby, Charles Isaacson, Albert Karpstein, John Barnes and Don Widing.

Forest Grove	6	4	.600

FINGER PRINTING TO BE COMPULSORY

Compulsory finger-printing of all persons engaged in the sale of alcoholic beverages "as a means of cleaning up the liquor trade" is urged by Miss Ethel Hubler of Los Angeles, member of the National Temperance Council, in a communication issued to every state liquor control board in the United States for consideration.

"More than 1200 men and women with criminal records have recently sought liquor licenses in Southern California," declared Miss Hubler in her letter to liquor control bodies. "These startling figures have just come to light, following the enforcement of compulsory finger-printing of all liquor license applicants in the Southern California area. Included on the list were the following: number 11; burglary 47; counterfeiting 9; arson 12; drunken driving 69; and many other criminal offenders.

"A number of wanted criminals were apprehended and many persons with long police records, including several murderers, were prevented from selling liquor as a direct result of the fingerprinting experiment," Miss Hubler declared.

It is urged that similar regulations be put into effect immediately in every state where alcoholic beverages are sold "as a means of eliminating a large part of the criminal element now in the ranks of the liquor trade."

"Such a regulation would, to some extent, assure the drinker who is prone to get 'chummy' with the man across the bar that he is not fraternizing with an ex-bank bandit, a counterfeiter, or a burglar," Miss Hubler said. "It would seem to me that retailers and wholesalers of beer, wines, and liquor, who wish to put their business on a more respectable basis would themselves, initiate a campaign for compulsory finger-printing, in order to rid the trade of undesirable."

H. EARLE WARNS AGAINST COMPANY

Hugh H. Earle, Insurance Commissioner, has received word from R. E. O'Malley, Superintendent of Insurance for the State of Missouri of the precarious condition of the Manufacturing Lumbermen's Underwriters, a reciprocal exchange of Kansas City, Missouri. So serious are the financial difficulties facing this insurance organization that Superintendent O'Malley has advised holders of policies or contracts to cancel their policies and properly protect themselves with other insurance.

A recent examination of the affairs of the exchange disclosed that during the first ten months of 1935 its losses exceeded a million dollars due largely to charging inadequate rates. Large additional losses have more recently occurred by fire, flood and water damage in the Ohio valley region against which this exchange carried substantial coverage.

Reasons advanced by Commissioner Earle for following the advice sent out by the Missouri officials are based on the following facts:

First, the members and policyholders of the exchange are, under the Oregon law, responsible for the losses and expenses of operating the exchange and this responsibility continues until their policies are canceled either by the member or policyholder, his attorney-in-fact, or by a court of competent jurisdiction. Neither the attorney nor any court has canceled these policies.

Second, recent reports on the financial condition of the exchange are very discouraging and losses occurring under these policies will in all probability not be paid for many months and possibly for years.

CLAYTON NYBURG HONORED AT MEET

An outstanding record of 4-H club achievement was cited at the annual achievement meeting for the Tualatin 4-H clubs which was sponsored by the Winona Grange at Tualatin, Monday, February 22, reports L. E. Francis, assistant county agent.

Eleven boys made up the membership of the six agricultural clubs in the community, all of which completed 100 per cent. Forty projects were carried by the members.

Most outstanding among the records made by the group was the winning of all four judging contests in the county with high point judge in three of the contests. This is a record which has never before been made in Washington county. The dairy club won the Calf Mamma trophy as the outstanding dairy club at the Washington County Fair.

First, fifth, and sixth places were won by members of the core club at the Commercial-National Bank Corn Show and second place at the Chicago International Corn Show. The outstanding 4-H boy of the county was Clayton Nyburg, who also was named as one of the 100 outstanding boys of the state.

Special recognition was given to Clayton Nyburg for his splendid record of achievement and leadership which is largely responsible for the splendid record that the boys have made. Clayton carried ten projects, led the dairy and pig clubs, was a member of all four winning judging teams, and was high scoring judge in three of the county judging contests. In addition he exhibited in all of his projects at the County and State Fair, winning 10 first places, seven seconds, three thirds, and eight fourth places. He sent the exhibit to Chicago which placed second in national competition.

At the conclusion of the meeting the members pledged their support to the activities of the boys and will promote their attainment in an effort to help them attain greater honors in the coming year.

Six achievement certificates in recognition of the 100 per cent completion of all of the clubs were presented to the leaders: M. G. Lafky, Walter Eames, Clayton Nyburg and Merle Pennington. The members of the clubs who received achievement awards were: 1st year—Bill Burkhead, Chas. Corbitt; 2nd year—Merle Corbitt; 5th year—Albert Gilroy; Herbert Lafky, Walter Eames; 6th year—Clayton Nyburg, Wilbur Nyburg, Willis Nyburg, Merle Pennington, Earl Sagert.

Beaverton Debaters Win Five Straight

Debaters Win Double Header From Gresham Last Thursday Night

WON ALL DEBATES

Affirmative Team Yet To Meet Canby Negative Team

The Beaverton high school debaters won a "double-header" from Gresham last Thursday night, February 25. The debaters took place upon the local platform and were a part of the regular State-District Debate Schedule.

Beaverton's affirmative debate team, Jay Gibson and Lyman Webb, met Gresham's Negative debaters at 7:30 p.m. and won by a vote of 3-0. Meanwhile our negative team, Marian Boyson and Edwin Blatter, defeated the affirmative team 2 to 1.

Thus in the first week the district contests Beaverton's debaters remained undefeated and had won four straight debates. These victories placed Beaverton and West Linn tied for first honors so far in the 5-county district debate series.

Thursday afternoon of this week Beaverton's negative team Marian Boyson and Russel Hulett met West Linn there in the most crucial debate of the week. The Beaver team won the debate by superior argument, rebuttal, and delivery, outpointing their opponents in every department of the contest showing careful preparation and superior knowledge of the State question, "Resolved That All Electric Utilities Should Be Governmentally Owned and Operated."

Beaverton meets Canby in the final debate of the series early next week.

"PIONEERS" TELL WHY THEY MOVED

Approximately 41 per cent of the immigrant families arriving in Oregon from 1930 to 1936, inclusive, were experienced farm operators, according to the results of a survey just published by the O.S.C. experiment station in cooperation with the WPA and resettlement administration.

The report is the result of a sample survey taken in 112 rural school districts in 16 Oregon counties. The survey, made through the use of relief labor, sought a general background of information concerning the families who have been settling in Oregon in increasing numbers, says L. K. Rehnaupt, state supervisor of rural research and author of the report.

Information previously obtained from all school district clerks showed that 5129 immigrant families arrived in Oregon from January 1933, to June 1936. The present report covers a period from January 1930 to November 1936, or nearly twice as long as the previous time.

The study showed that a larger percentage of the families coming in 1936 were headed by persons who had actual experience in farm operation than was the case previously.

Contrary to a common belief that practically all of the immigrants came from the middle west, the study showed that 53 per cent came from the western group of states. A total of 44.3 per cent came from the north and south central states, while scattering numbers ranging to less than 1 per cent came from the other more distant regions of the country.

Inadequate income in their former location was named by 51 per cent of the families as the reason for leaving their state of previous residence. The drought was blamed by 29 per cent, while change of climate, health, or loss of job were cited by many others. Relatives or friends in Oregon was the principal reason given by these migrants for coming to this state, 25 per cent of them giving this as the chief factor involved. Climate persuaded 12 per cent, previous visits to Oregon, 9 per cent, while 3 per cent said they were attracted by advertising.

The present attitude toward Oregon by nearly all families visited was very favorable and most of them, except recent arrivals, had made substantial progress toward acquiring ownership of farms.

HOG RAISERS HAVE GOOD MEETING

Sixty Washington county hog raisers attended the meeting at the county courthouse Friday, Feb. 19, at which time Prof. A. W. Oliver, Oregon State College, discussed problems in connection with hog management, reports L. E. Francis, assistant county agent.

The keynote to P. Messer, Oliver's discussion was that the fundamental principle for successful brood sow management and care of young pigs was a properly balanced ration containing the right amounts of minerals and the correct amounts and types of protein.

Professor Oliver further pointed out the vital necessity for sanitation as a prevention for most of the common ailments that afflict small pigs and stated that the majority of the troubles pigs have with worms could easily be avoided if they were not allowed to become infested until after they were about three months old at which time worm infestations have no apparent effect on them.

Hog lot rotation and proper housing and farrowing facilities were other points discussed as well as matters in connection with pigs suffering from anemia and weak legs.

At the conclusion of his talk, Professor Oliver answered miscellaneous questions asked by the hog raisers.

HEALTH NEEDS OF COUNTY ARE SHOWN

Oregon has made splendid progress in disease prevention and the general promotion of public health, yet no more than the surface has been scratched. According to government statistics, the average American spends annually ten dollars for candy, nine dollars for education, seventy-five cents for perfume, and fifty cents for chewing gum. The average amount spent for public health is about thirty cents. (Data of O.S.C. pay less than five cents per capita for health protection. Millions are spent for education, but only well children can and should go to school. Millions are required annually to maintain penal and correctional institutions and hospitals for the insane. These would not be so crowded if everyone were mentally and physically well. Charity and poor relief take a large sum of money annually, yet everyone knows that the greatest cause of poverty is ill health.

Efficient public health work can greatly reduce the state expense for eleemosynary purposes by preventing causes that make these expenditures necessary. Prevention of human wrecks is much less expensive than the cost of caring for them. We should be more concerned about what it would cost to be without health protection than with what health protection costs. Hardly anyone would argue that the state of Oregon has ever been unduly extravagant in expenditures for protecting the public health. In fact, the most effective measures in this field are even now scarcely developed. Public opinion has not yet grasped the usefulness of health conservation and the fact that its cost to the taxpayer is saved many times over by the prevention of disease and death. The gains made in the elimination or curbing of such diseases as typhoid fever, tuberculosis, diphtheria and other communicable diseases is a record of which the people of this state may well be proud. But in order to maintain the efficiency of the health department, sufficient funds are needed to employ experts or those who have been properly trained in the field of disease prevention. The menace of contamination, stream pollution, unsanitary milk and food supplies and unregulated quarantine in interstate travel, must be added to other hardships now confronting this state.

The average community needs a well-organized health department which emphasizes the following activities:

1. The safeguarding of the health of mothers and children.
2. Prevention and control of communicable diseases.
3. Venereal disease prevention and control of syphilis.
4. Recording of accurate vital statistics.
5. Support of a hygienic laboratory for the detection and prevention of communicable diseases.
6. Sanitary control of diseases spread from human wastes and by vermin and insects.

Not only the State Board of Health but local and city health departments as well have as a primary motive the carrying out of these essential activities. Adequate health organization and whole-hearted support on the part of the state and local agencies are essential if these activities are to be successfully maintained. Incidentally, whole-hearted support includes a willingness and readiness to furnish such services by making proper provision for them in the annual budget.

INTEREST SHOWN IN VISUAL EDUCATION

A growing interest in visual education, particularly through the use of educational moving pictures, is noted in the annual report of U. S. Burt, head of the department of visual education at Oregon State college. Burt handles general material for the entire system, as well as that for the cooperative extension service.

Burt's records show that 539,678 persons attended meetings last year where films obtained from his department were shown. Largest users were CCC camps, 4-H clubs, grades and grade schools. His collection now consists of 550 films and 786 slides, which are available for renting at nominal cost. These include more than 100 films supplied by the federal government for distribution through Burt's office to other states in the west, including Washington, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming and California.
