"SHOOTING THE SUN"

"SHOOTING the sun" is fun to any merchant marine cadet, but it's also serious business in learning how to navigate a ship. So First Officer Ernest Prather, of the Grace Line's "Santa Elena," shows Cadet Leonard Burger how to perform one of the seaman's most traditional duties.

Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Roberts and daughter Elaine of Portland and Mr. and Mrs. R. Roberts of Milwaukee.

Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Eliander,

The Preacher's Dream

"If only I could have the seats full every Sunday like on Easter and for the mid-week."

Hold on, preacher. Even then one thing thou lackest. Even then you couldn't see Old Cave Man come through. With his long matted beard and unkempt hair and that o'coat winter and summer to hide his rags, he wouldn't feel at home with your kind. One eye staring blind from that explosion in the mines—and smelly too—No, he wouldn't quite fit in. You can't have him and his kind unless you come to them.

Months would pass without our seeing the man. Then he would slip in for a service; silent like a six-foot cave dweller from out the stone age and always done up in the wrapping of long coat. We tried to be friendly and get the truth home. One rainy night two years back he was glad of a lift toward the place where he was to hole in out of the mist. Before he left the car there was a heart to heart; a word of prayer; then the months passed with nothing happening until this early summer. A bit of light and hope had crept into that dull, timid face. We spoke of it. Next he blossomed out in a decent suit minus the overcoat.

He was back later and raised his hand for prayer. So he at least believed there was a God who could help him. How much faith must we show to bring God into our poor faded lives? And when did the Lord begin to undertake for this frail reed? Anyway, a few nights later the man was on his feet to confess Christ and testify in a few words that he called himself saved. Later told of a chapter of testing and of throwing himself on the Lord and that he had been strengthened when all was pitchy dark and hopeless. Now Mr. Preacher, you can bid him in to sit with your folks, a new creation in Jesus Christ.
