URA LYRE'S OWN COLUMN

Does Pittsburgh do things on a large scale. Well, you said it. A recent leader in a daily local paper is to the effect that love is everywhere and so are whisky, stills; the most immense in size since prohibition. In fact, it would seem some of the most immense and numerous ones even including prohibition times have really been in the offing; while also the published quantity of liquor of a legal nature consumed by the people of Pennsylvania during the last year of hard times has amounted to over $80,000,000; or some $8 for every man, woman and child. In other words that means well toward $40 for each family. What the total amount including bottles is no one knows.

Nor is that all. What are alleged to have been notorious dives of long standing, of large and numerous caliber, are being attacked. One earnest official who is trying to do something in the face of determined opposition, declared that he is not doing this for politics; that he is not a reformer either; and that as long as a place is run decently, he will not bother them; but that prostitutes, procurers and stick up men who have made the Hill side district unsafe must be cleaned out. There is plenty of hillside district here; though the writer has found more level and straight streets (in the eastern portion of the city) than suspected at the time of last week's article. Blistering unconcealed charges are published here.

Attention has been called to the big airport, upon which some $3,000,000 has been spent and as much more may be expended the large steel mill, claimed to be the hugest ever and which was commenced before the recent "recession," compression, suppression portion of the long continued blasting Roosevelt depression set in; and other large establishments built up. In this let us call into view some other things that are on a gigantic scale.

At the close of last week's statements of bank deposits were published here. A total of the deposits for nine banks amounted to far beyond the $800,000,000 mark; while a total of the deposits, surpluses and capital stocks amounts to over a billion dollars. Remember this is Pittsburgh alone. A huge sum when compared with those of our own states of Oregon and Washington.

Within the last week a visit to the East Liberty Presbyterian (quite often referred to as the Mellon) church was visited. It was especially built by R. Mellon and wife as a memorial to their mothers at a cost of some $4,000,000. It is an immense affair; on account of its location not being fully appreciated from the outside. We were told that 512 keys were required for all the locks. In an hour's investigation, conducted by one of 25 regularly employed persons connected with the organization, only the main rooms together with representative ones were seen. One room with one hundred chairs and another of five hundred, all of aluminum, were for dining purposes. The largest of some three or more auditoriums seats 1700 and 5,000 have been taken care of at one session in the church. Beautifully carved wood from many localities was much in evidence, as was polished marble of a dozen kinds upon the chancel floor; one large sculptured piece of the "last supper" with at least life sized figures of the participants. The window represented various Bible scenes or stories as well as that of noted poems in English and American history.

It was from this church that the body of Andrew Mellon, a younger brother of R. E., and for so long Secretary of the U. S. Treasury, was taken to his burial. (However that body occupies no more space than other man.) This is really, so far as church is concerned, a Presbyterian town, probably due to no small extent to the fact that the Mellons; Andrew Carnegie, the Scotchman; and many of their close associates, friends and relatives, as well as some other who got their wealth from either coal, steel, oil, aluminum and other products in this vicinity were of that persuasion. Of course there are other churches also.

Politics is sizzling, but must go over to our next.

INFLUENZA

It is very difficult to draw a sharp line between diseases known as common colds and influenza. Although influenza is a real infection there is still considerable uncertainty in regard to the causative organism. This disease has occurred in a great number of epidemics and even world wide pandemics. The greatest epidemic of modern times occurred in 1918-1919. Beginning in Europe this epidemic spread over the entire world. The virulence of this disease seemed to increase with its duration. The term of influenza passed rapidly from one to another growing more deadly and mild cases were replaced by those of the greatest severity. The question is often asked it is possible for such an epidemic to occur again? The answer must be yes since no effective means of controlling this disease have yet been discovered. The best that we can do is to exercise the same general measures that are effective in preventing the transference of mouth and nasal secretions and take the best possible care of those who contact the infection.

Medical science has been unable to solve the problem of influenza. Opinion is at variance with respect to the efficiency of many measures advocated for control. Some believe we are powerless to do anything to prevent these epidemics as were we against smallpox before vaccination was discovered. Others believe that accepted measures for the prevention of the spread of respiratory diseases if regularly and effectively applied are of consid-

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

UNUSUAL LIGHTINGS

With one small bulb in reflector, put the camera on a table and give a one-second time exposure. Load with supersensitive film, of course.

You get candle-light and lamp-light effects with the arrangement in Diagram 2. Light from the flood bulb and lamp comes from the same direction, so that shadows fall naturally. Note that you point the camera so that the photo bulb doesn't show in the picture. And—don't let direct light from a photo bulb shine on your lens.

Try snaps of this type. They are interesting, and well worth your while.

ARE YOU ONLY A THREE-QUARTER WIFE?

MEN, because they are men, can never understand a wife who is all love and kindness three weeks in a month and a hell cat the rest of the time.

No matter how your back aches—how your nerves scream—don't take it out on your husband. For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

HOW OFTEN CAN YOU KISS AND MAKE UP?

FEW husbands can understand why a wife should turn from a pleasant companion into a shrew for one whole week in every month. You can say "I'm sorry" and kiss and make up easier before marriage than after. Be wise. If you want to hold your husband, you won't be a three-quarter wife.
