URA LYRE'S OWN COLUMN

In a recent speech at Gainesville, Georgia, it is reported President Roosevelt declares that a selfish minority is holding back a nation wide prosperity. Well, well! So our chief now finds himself and an outfit of blind followers and salaried hangers on in the minority, does he? After five years of unrestrained and complete control of everything in the executive and legislative departments, and recently even in the judicial as well, the spending or squandering of the score of billions of dollars more than we have been able to raise by the most burdensome and disheartening taxes in all history; even the Congress, elected almost as a whole according to his own desires, is turning against his policies; while the opposition party strong throughout the nation but only measurably represented in the House and senate is being augmented daily as snarls increase. Yes we will agree with him; a strong ruler selfish minority is holding back a nation wide prosperity.

"Today Germany is curs; tomorrow the whole world will belong to us," say Hitler's storm troops. It is the old idea of "Deutschland ueber alles." Unfortunately for the world and freedom loving people at large, Italy and Japan have the same kind of ideas for themselves. We may well beware.

Forty-nine puppets in Washington! Will they take cognizance of the handwriting on the wall. In Salem among the people we have maintained these groups that have made records for themselves; inmates of the penitentiary, three of the insane asylum and those of the leprosy hospital. It is to be hoped that eventually the majority of the present government in Washington will some day exercise as much intelligence as these groups in Oregon.

Ura Lyre has just been taking a squint at New York City. Say! Do you know? It is more than twice as large as Beaverton. Tigard and Hillsboro all put together. When looking up at some building, you need to look twice to see the top; for instance, the Empire State building, the Chrysler building and the loftiest part of Radio City. Whew! But I can not tell you about it now. Some of the recent articles from this pen (or lead pencil) have dealt largely with scenes and edifices so most of this will be on matters political. If the people generally were of the same political conviction as the overwhelming majority Ura Lyre has talked with from Oregon to New York

(generally among the intelligent class) the next general election would or will show a complete turnover in Congress. Even Senator Wagner of this state of New York has had the stamina to turn on this last and refuse to longer be a "yes man." In the past however he has not been the nomenity that many recent appointees or those elected in the last half dozen years are. It is a great relief to find some who do not get down and grovel in the dust on their prayer bones to their father in Washington to tell them how to vote. Of course some one or more of them deny this.

ROSEBURG — Many Douglas county sheep growers are cross fencing their grazing lands to allow rotation grazing, which gives each section a rest during a part of the year and provides a means of reseeding certain pastures and giving the plants a chance to become well established before being grazed, says County Agent J. Roland Parker. Most of the successful growers are now agreed that best results are obtained by burning over the ground before seeding. Grasses being used which give the greatest promise of providing a palatable and nutritious pasture in this county are highland bent, English rye, orchard grass, dactylis rye, tall oat and meadow fescue.

Indians To Have Irrigation SIMNASHO—An irrigation system to supply 245 acres of Indian lands with water from the new Happy Canyon dam built by the soil conservation service has been approved as to plans and will be under construction soon. The new irrigated acreage will be devoted to production of forage crops, additional supplies of which are essential in making effective a seasonal grazing program on the reservation range lands. The tract is about sixty miles south of The Dalles.

Big Irrigation Ditch Dug ALBANY—An irrigation ditch approximately a mile long, expected to carry sufficient water to irrigate 300 acres, is being constructed by Frank Rohwein and sons of the Jordan community, according to County Agent P. C. Mullen, who assisted with the survey for the project. A tractor bull-dozer was used where large quantities of dirt were removed. In some places the ditch is being dug nine feet deep.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD DON'T INCLUDE TOO MUCH. Close-up viewpoint eliminates furniture, surplus details—makes picture include just what you want, nothing more. WHEN you snap a picture, do you get close enough to your subject? This is one of the best ways to make your pictures simple and unified. Get close enough to eliminate objects and details that have nothing to do with the picture subject. Let your subject appear large enough to "dominate" the picture. To make your pictures include just enough, and not too much, use your view finder carefully. Decide what you want to take, point the camera at the chosen subject, and move forward until the image in the view finder shows just the part you want. Then judge the distance carefully, focus accurately, and snap the picture. Most cameras, including box camera, allow you to snap pictures when you are as near as six to eight feet to your subject. Some focus for closer distances. And, if you slip a portrait attachment on the camera lens, you can snap pictures at three and one-half feet or nearer. When you get a picture that happens to include too much, try trimming it until it looks right. Then have an enlargement made of the picture as trimmed. Make it a rule to take pictures near enough to exclude everything that does not help your "picture idea." Soon you will find you are getting better pictures. John van Guilder
