CHORUS:
Put on your old grey bonnet

HIS father was postmaster of Joplin, Mo., with a fine voice and the knack of writing songs for political rallies. His mother played the organ; she taught her young son all she knew.

At twenty-one he was sent to Chicago Musical College, where he began to write instrumental pieces. The first popular song he wrote was for Frank "Em Back Alive" Buck, called "Ashy Africa," which the game hunter published with another by the same composer "Just Because I'm From Missouri." He got a job as a song plugger in Gimbel's department store in Milwaukee, but after six months came to Manhattan where he wrote his first big hit—"Rainbow."

He followed with "Moonlight Bay," "When You Were a Tulip And I Wore a Big Red Rose," in 1914 when the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers was organized he became one of its first members.

He toured vaudeville and wrote songs for the next fifteen years. During the war, he wrote "Where Do We Go From Here, Boys?" Now he is living in Hollywood, writing instrumental numbers and occasional popular tunes.

American Milk World Leader

Science double checks as tests are constantly being applied to milk to protect its purity and safeguard quality for the home.

DISTRIBUTION of milk in this country has grown to a point where it far outstrips any other country in the world in volume and sanitary protection of its product. When 30 million bottles of fresh milk are placed on the doorsteps of American homes every day this stupendous but unobtrusive daily service to consumers is so efficiently carried out as to be almost unbelievable to foreign milk experts. Daily distribution of milk by trained organizations is a distinctive American development, says the Milk Industry Foundation, as few consumers in foreign lands have a dependable protected supply of milk delivered daily at their doorsteps. In most other countries milk distribution is generally an antiquated, although traditional, bit of business. Dog carts, mules, hand tanks and other primitive means are used to make deliveries. As a rule milk is dipped from open containers, a vessel supplied by the housewife. The modern equipment of the American milk distributor is in direct contrast to most foreign methods. Here the distributor is trained in the handling and processing of a perishable food and also serves as a guardian of the community health. Pasteurizing, bottle-washing, bottling, capping, refrigerating, testing, safeguarding butterfat content, inspecting farms and the myriad details of delivery equipment, all of which protect the milk, are a most unknown to foreign milkmen.
