AMERICANISM "Americanism is an unfeeling love of country; loyalty to its institutions and ideals; eagerness to defend it against all enemies; undivided allegiance to the flag; and a desire to secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity."

PROBLEM

The human body is a marvelous machine. The home economics department of an eastern university recently calculated that a 150-pound person who walks at the rate of 2.6 miles an hour, would have to walk four miles to use the energy from a five cent chocolate bar, five to seven miles to use that from an ice cream sundae and six and one-half miles if stoked with a piece of pie.

Problem: What becomes of the surplus of energy when a 150-pound citizen finishes off a turkey dinner with a portion of pie a la mode, climbs into his car and rides to the movie and munches chocolate bars during the show?

THE MAP MAKERS

Map-makers are your genuine upholders of things as they are. In a world of rapidly changing boundaries, who wants to invest in a map? And why even make them, when they may have to be altered by the middle of next week?

For this reason, if for no others, the cartographers do not like Hitler. They do not like Mussolini, or the Japanese or, for the matter of that, the Russians. Boundary commissions, crawling dispiritedly through the years, are one of their pet hates.

And they do not cede territory half as blithely as a government might. Some have given Hitler the Sudetenland, but there are as many holdouts. They have been willing to accept the merging of Ethiopia with Eritrea and Italian Somaliland, but are still withholding Albania from Italy. According to the map makers, the fate of Bohemia, Moravia and Slovakia is not yet decided.

Propagandists are less reluctant to accept change. They have made maps showing almost the entire rim of the Mediterranean as Italian. They have extended the borders of Germany down to Rumania, or even to the Persian Gulf. They have shown Japan in possession of China, most of the Eastern Asia seaboard and the Philippines, to say nothing of the rich islands of the South Seas.

The map-makers who prefer to stick approximately to the facts refuse to compete with these gentlemen.

THE ROOT OF ALL EVIL

Much misquoted is the tenth verse, sixth chapter of the First Epistle to Timothy. Correctly it reads that "the love of money is the root of all evil." Not money, but the love of money. It was written nineteen centuries ago and the opinion has now been approved and affirmed by the Public Affairs Committee, Inc., whose spokesman is Winthrop D. Lane.

His pamphlet, just published by the committee, asserts that "as a people we attach too much importance to money," and that this misguided sense of values is a major cause of crime in America. The urge to make money blurs the dividing line between right and wrong. Probably Mr. Lane speaks painful truths, but Horace said it first. "Money, make money, by honest means, if you can; if not, by any means make money." Alexander Pope, the poet, also said it. "Get money, money still, and then let virtue follow, if she will."

There is more novelty, though no less truth, in Mr. Lane's opinion that "the line between some business practices and such crimes as theft, robbery and burglary is very narrow and difficult to see." Many well-meaning business men have pondered the same problem. Some accepted standards and practices of the business world could never serve the needs of an honest private life. A man may be compelled to anesthetize his personal conscience while he earns his living.

Now and then comes to light a dramatic contrast between a decent and honorable private life and outrageous dishonesty in business. Sometimes somebody goes to jail for stealing and swindling whose private life has been scrupulously respectable. The love of money did it, says Mr. Lane. But Horace and Paul of Tarsus said it first.

LIBRARY

Janet Ayer Fairbank, like her sister Margaret Ayer Barnes, is a novelist. Her books usually treat of American family life with contemporary history, politics, business, fashions, popular song and slang woven into them. In "Bright Land" by Janet Fairbank, the heroine is a New England girl who is just starting off to a female academy as the story opens. Her life there, her subsequent marriage and life in the bustling town of Galena is told against a background of financial booms and panics, political parties, and growth of the country.

The story begins at the time of President Van Buren's administration and ends at the time of the Spanish-American war. The book is in the Beaverton Community library.

Examination To Be Held For Appointment

October 7, the Civil Service commission will hold an examination to determine eligible applicants for appointment to the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland.

The First Congressional district of Oregon will have two vacancies at that academy in 1940. The successful candidate will enter the academy next June. Congressman James W. Mott is anxious that all ambitious young men in the first district, which he represents, have an opportunity to try for these coveted appointments.

Any young unmarried man, not less than 16 years of age nor more than twenty years of age on April 1, 1940, may compete.

In order to make the required arrangements it is necessary that the applicant notify Congressman James W. Mott, Salem, Oregon, not later than September 1, of his desire to participate in the examination.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD ANIMAL PICTURES

Any barnyard is full of excellent human-interest picture chances... such as this close-up shot of a hen mothering her chicks.

WHEN someone mentions bird and animal pictures, most of us think of zoos, forests, or the African jungle. But—if you live on or near a farm—you have access to a number of fine animal subjects. And, take my word for it, domestic animals yield just as good pictures as wild ones. Just for the fun of it, why not spend a day picturing farm animals? Go after expressive, human-interest shots, such as a hen mothering her brood, or pigs struggling for position at the trough. Shoot close-ups of a placid, cud-chewing cow, or a husky work-horse—just as if you were taking pictures of a person. Many animals have definite, almost-human expressions at times... and they'll make fine pictures for your album. Distant shots, showing the animal small, will be disappointing unless it happens to be an incidental figure in a scene. Most focusing cameras are adjusted to take subjects as near as six feet—many four feet, or even less. Many box cameras can be set for subjects as near as five. And, if you slip a portrait attachment on the camera lens, you can get even closer. Or, you can take a shot at normal distance, and have the best part of the negative enlarged to give a close-up effect. It's not necessary to show all of a large animal, such as a cow or horse. Indeed, the head alone often makes a better picture. Choose the viewpoint which shows the head and expression most effectively—and fire away. Keep the background simple—changing your position when necessary to get distracting object out of the camera's field of view. Take your camera to the farm... keep your eyes open... shoot wisely and often. You'll find that any well-stocked barnyard yields splendid picture dividends. John van Gulder

The Cook's Nook

Health Cooked Cabbage Shred cabbage quite fine, cover with salted boiling water, boil only 15 minutes. Drain. Pour boiling water over again, boil about 3 minutes, drain. Serve with salt pepper and butter, generously topped. Grated cheese adds flavor.

Melons for Breakfast Melon at breakfast tastes twice as good when you cut it into cubes and serve it in a big, chilly glass of Florida orange juice. Down in Florida, where melons grow big, they like to immerse almost any kind in orange or grapefruit juice. Right now the canned varieties of juice are easy and quick.

Banana Bavarian 1 pkg. orange-flavored gelatin 1 1/2 cups hot water Dash of salt 1/2 cup sugar 1/2 teasp. grated orange rind 1/2 cup Florida orange juice 1/2 cup whipping cream 1 1/2 cups finely diced ripe bananas (2 to 3) Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Add salt, sugar, orange rind and juice. Chill until cold and syrupy. Whip cream until thick but not stiff. Fold into gelatin. Fold in bananas. Chill until slightly thickened. Turn into 1 large or 7 small molds. Chill until firm. Six to 8 servings. Leave out the cream and substituting lemon juice and rind for the orange makes a very good salad with 1 cup dry cottage cheese added.

Florida Snow 1 envelope plain, unflavored gelatin 1/4 cup cold water 1 cup boiling water 1/2 cup sugar 1/2 cup Florida orange or grapefruit juice 1 teasp. grated lemon rind 2 egg whites 1/2 teasp. salt Soften gelatin in cold water. Dissolve in hot water. Add sugar and salt, stir until dissolved, add the fruit juice (the combination orange-grapefruit juice available in cans is excellent) and rind. Beat with rotary beater until consistency of whipped cream. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into large mold, chill until firm. Serve with custard sauce. Serves 6.

Grape Snow Pudding 1 cup grape juice 1 envelope plain unflavored gelatin 4 tbsps. white karo 1 egg white, beaten stiff 1/2 cup whipped cream. Pour 1/4 cup cold grape juice over gelatin and let stand 5 minutes. Heat remaining juice with the karo to boiling point. Dissolve softened gelatin in hot liquid. Chill and when thick but not set, beat with egg beater until thick and fluffy. Fold in beaten egg whites and whipped cream. Mold and chill. Six servings.

The Church Aga Ends

Why did God bless the Old Testament Jew who did his will and then let the New Testament Christians go to prison and to death? Why bless the one and not the other? Answer—The Jews were God's earthly people, with riches of flock, herd, family and gold, if they would serve him. But the Christians look for spiritual blessings. To them Christ said, "In the world ye shall have tribulation." True enough. Of the Twelve Apostles all but one died the martyr's death. And untold thousands since. As to the Destiny of the Jews—glorious at the end, but for now "Blindness in part is happened to Israel until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in." Fulness of the Gentiles means until out of all nations the full number is called to complete the roll-call of the redeemed. Whoever will may come—red man, black man, yellow, brown, white, grafter, boozier, quitter, vile and vicious—Come as you are. With the last name added, the roll finished, The Church-Aga Ends. The Lord will then descend from heaven with a shout, open the graves of His own, give them who are alive on the earth, so Bodies of Glory. Likewise His will they be with him forever. The lost dead will be raised later for The Judgment Day. With the church gone from the earth, comes The Great Tribulation. "And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved; but for the elects sake, those days shall be shortened." ELECT in this case are the Jews who will come

by ZELMA HOOKER

Sam Brady was a reporter, and a good one. With a five-cent note book in one hand and in the other a pencil devoted equally to scribbling notations and to scratching the tip of his right ear, Sam could collect more news in one day than the average person could live in a year. What mattered it that Sam's news was limited to the small locality of an outlying community, or that his neatly written volumes were condensed by a hard-boiled editor to a scant two or three inches of space, when the small sum-total admittedly showed a trace of real talent. But to Sam life was not quite complete. You see, he had one great desire, as you might say, a mounting passion which gave point to his rather meager existence. Someday, although he was not very sure as to how it was to be accomplished, Sam was going to make the front page of his daily. Readers unfolding papers would see beneath startling headlines a Sam Brady story. For that moment alone he lived and dreamed. And then one day, venturing forth in his quest for news, Sam knew that his great opportunity had come. The moment for which he had lived was within his grasp. At the corner of Davis and Blaine streets a big maroon sedan passed him and paused for a moment at the stop sign. As a matter of news-gathering habit, Sam speeded his steps and casually glanced into the car and at that instant received the shock of his life. Right before Sam, seated in the maroon sedan, was the state's governor. There wasn't much strange about that, but there was something strange about the governor's companion. Sam could recognize the governor, and he was also pretty good at recognizing the governor's wife. And that blonde with the possessive manner didn't come under the latter classification. Five seconds later Sam was sprinting madly for a car parked along the nearest curb. Not that it was his, but he had seen keys dangling from the ignition and that was enough for him in a present mood. Tearing the door open, he pushed his lean form under the steering wheel and ground the starter. By the time the maroon sedan was a block away rolling swiftly into the open country, Sam was speeding after it, bending the floorboards downward with his accelerator foot. Although just how he expected to overtake he obviously faster car and what he would do if he did, he probably couldn't have told. Now fate was certainly cooperating to make that a big day. Just then came a sound that set the pages of Sam's notebook right up on edge; the scream of a locomotive as it bears down upon a crossing, and that crossing was just ten seconds ahead of Sam's radiator cap. The maroon sedan groundhounded down the concrete and rocketed across the tracks with a scant quarter second to spare. But nobody had any time to spare Sam, and that was just the thing he needed most. The highway widened and climbed upon the running boards and the mail car hesitated, hung for a moment, an dthen leaned over and put a stamp on Sam, the stamp of death. That evening Sam Brady made the front page of both city dailies. But Sam wasn't living for that moment anymore.

That awful time of testing. To these Jews Christ becomes SAVIOUR AND KING. For "There shall come out of Zion the Redeemer and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob. For this is my covenant unto them when I shall take away their sins. So all Israel shall be saved. Christ now sets up His reign of one thousand years upon the earth. The Millennium with the Hebrew Nation at last come into its promised glory. Many Jews are even now becoming believers. Why not? Under Peter's preaching great numbers came to the feet of David's royal son, their Messiah, who SAVE—KEEPS—SATISFIES all men of whatever race or age.
