Land Clearing Methods Interest Settlers

Calls for land clearing information in Oregon are steadily on the increase, states Everett Davis, extension agricultural engineer at Oregon State college.

With the influx of new settlers in the state, more and more brush-covered and other waste lands are being cleared, says Davis. These new settlers are interested in knowing methods of removing stumps by blasting and mechanical means.

The present method of slashing and burning is tedious, expensive and not too effective, states Davis. A diesel-operated bulldozer has been successfully used in some localities. Costs have run about $20 per acre, depending on the nature of the stumps.

Portable power-driven stump burners are now on the market which are satisfactory for burning large stumps. Costs vary from 10 to 25 cents per stump. With the 18-point burners two 30-inch stumps can be burned in 12 to 16 hours.

Drivers To Receive Instruction

Pupils of the Beaverton high school who wish to learn to drive an automobile under trained instructors are invited to enroll in the safety driving class to be sponsored at the high school by Earl Snell, secretary of state, as a part of his state-wide traffic safety campaign, it was announced today.

The classes will start Monday, November 6, at 1 p.m., and will be held at the same time each week for seven weeks during which students will be taught various phases of driving an automobile from starting the motor to starting the car on a steep grade. Persons 15 years of age or older are eligible for the course, each pupil to furnish his own car. Driver's licenses are not necessary, but no one except licensed operators will be permitted to drive the car to or from the school.

With the exception of the opening session all class work consists of actual driving with the pupil at the wheel of his car. The instruction includes the proper way to start the motor, the use of the clutch, starting the car smoothly and moving forward and backward, turning, driving in traffic, parallel parking, stopping and starting on hills. Throughout the school principles of safe driving are stressed.

Those who take the course are urged to practice diligently between classes as that is the only way they can master the various phases of driving, Snell declared. Parallel parking, for example, is a simple matter to teach, but the student must practice it several times before becoming expert.

The safety driving schools have been sponsored in 62 towns and cities of the state in the past two years with an enrollment of approximately 4500 persons. They are based on the theory that drivers who learn to drive properly will be better drivers and therefore safer operators, Snell explained.

E. L. Van Blaricom will be the instructor in charge of the local school.
