Tuning Around the Dial

With Jack Hale

Television is just around the corner, you have undoubtedly heard, but that corner is a hard one to turn.

If you think static will be eliminated by television you are mistaken. The static appears in the form of "Bubbles" on the picture and in some static breeding vicinities the "Bubbles" cover a large portion of the screened image. Radio engineers and research men are working on this problem but the situation still exists in a menacing form.

If static was the only trouble, radio men would be happy indeed. Another problem is its inability to "get out." At present if a listener can pick up a television program 25 miles from the transmitter site it is considered good reception. An experimenter in South Africa reports reception of a London, England, tele-cast but that undoubtedly was an exception.

Higher station power has been tried for distant reception with out much success. If this condition of a program radius of only 25 miles continues to exist, television will remain around that corner.

Real Dope!!!! An unconfirmed rumor has it that a certain big name orchestra leader will have to drop from the public's eye until he is cured of using dope. This sounds like propaganda but it wouldn't be unconstitutional to watch for developments.

Information Plez—Any one who wishes to have questions concerning radio answered can drop a line or leave your question at the Review office. Questions of merit will be answered in this column.

If you like this column tell your friends about it so they can enjoy it with you.
