AMERICANISM
"Americanism is unflinching love of country; loyalty to its institutions and ideals; eagerness to defend it against all enemies; undivided allegiance to the flag; and a desire to secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity."

Editorials...

What and When?

The war, the authorities say, will remain fairly quiet until spring--no one is expected to start a major offensive while the bad weather holds. And in the spring, it is forecast in some quarters, Hitler will make his bid for victory. Time works with the Allies, and against the Reich. The military men mainly think that Hitler must win this year, or lose.

The Russo-Finnish controversy still holds the spotlight. To quote the military authorities once once more, it is felt that the Red army has been bad--but not as bad as it has appeared to most laymen. The Arctic weather has helped the Finns, who know the terrain and are masters of guerrilla tactics. And the Russian troops, at the start at least, comprised third class, not first class divisions. Stalin apparently woefully underestimated the spirit of Russia's little neighbor.

There is considerable speculation as to what will happen once the Finish business is settled. A Russian drive against India would not startle the experts. And if that should happen, England would be in a tough spot. It would mean that she must divert great quantities of troops, equipment and supplies from the continent, and thus weaken her support of France on the Western front. England would have to give every effort to defeating the Soviet--a successful Russian drive to the East would mean the shattering of the great empire's life-line.

There is still talk of the possibility of a "peace offensive" this year, with the Pope, President Roosevelt and Mussolini taking the leading roles. At the moment, the outlook for peace seems black indeed--but change can take place first.
