PICK A PICTURE SPECIALTY

AS YOU become more skilled in photography, you may find that certain subjects or types of pictures appeal to you strongly. If so, it is wise to specialize on this preferred type. Such specializing doesn't limit you; indeed, if you master the taking of one kind of picture, the knowledge will help you in taking other kinds.

Here are a few of the picture specialties that many amateurs find interesting. Perhaps in the list you will find one that just fits your own needs:

Action pictures: If you have a camera with fast lens and rapid shutter, this is an interesting field, full of thrills and dramatic opportunities. Both winter and summer sports offer splendid chances for action shots.

Flower pictures: This is a year-around specialty. In winter, picture your window garden; in summer, the outdoor garden. Any camera is suitable, but more satisfactory results will be obtained if it is fitted with a portrait attachment.

Outdoor pictures at night: Modern fast films now make such shots easier. Short time exposures with ordinary equipment, or even snapshots with ultra-fast lenses, enable you to picture street scenes and illuminated shop windows. Twilight offers many interesting picture effects; and snow scenes have striking beauty under moonlight or street lamps. All you need is a camera, and a tripod or some solid object to support it during time exposures with the slower lenses.

Architectural pictures: It's great fun to explore a town in search of interesting architecture—novel doorways, odd bits of old-fashioned "gingerbread" decoration, or such historic structures as the one pictured here. This, too, is an all-year specialty.

Table-top pictures: Here is a specialty that offers ample scope for originality. Construct small scenes or situations, using dolls, toy animals, toy houses, etc.—then picture them. Any focusing camera, or a fixed-focus model with portrait attachment added, will do. And "table-topping" is an entertaining pastime at any season.

Silhouette pictures, pet and animal pictures, nature pictures—these are also worthy specialties. Informal portrait snaps of the baby or other members of the family also are a popular field; and there are many others. Choose your specialty—cultivate it—build up a fine collection of pictures in this one line—and you'll be an abler photographer in any other field.

Beaverton Kiwanis Lose Pelican Bird

LOST—One Pelican. The Kiwanis club of Beaverton has lost its pelican to the Kiwanis club of Monroe Washington. President Ed. J. Bascom and twenty sturdy fellow Kiwanians descended upon the Beaverton club and were entertained at a noon luncheon last Wednesday, April 10. They scored a total of 7085 man miles traveled which qualified them to be the next possessor of that marvelous bird.

The Pelican is a symbol of friendship to be given to the club that travels the most man miles. It originated with the Kalama Falls Oregon club for the purpose of promoting inter club meetings and friendship. The Pelican is a very busy bird.

The Beaverton Junior Kiwanians, Howard Johnson, and Bill Moshofsky took over the entertainment and gave a fine repeat performance for the benefit of the visiting Kiwanians and presented their fellow student, Robert (Bob) Sayre who repeated his excellent oration "Our Constitution, Liberty's Safeguard."

DEAN SHIRRELL HITS STUDENT AUTO

Nearly Always a Temptation to Waste Time, and Often Actually a Detriment to Morals, He Asserts

That an automobile "is to most students a temptation to waste time, and in some cases it is a detriment to morals," is the statement made by Elmer L. Shirrell, dean of men of the University, in a letter sent out to hundreds of parents of university students advising against the students bringing cars with them to Eugene this fall. Dean Shirrell took this step following an attempt to hear from dozens of men of a large number of American universities what steps toward the control of student-owned automobiles have been taken in their particular institutions.

"We do not intend at the present time to make regulations on the subject of student automobiles as other universities have," states Dean Shirrell. "We should much prefer to have this problem solved by the co-operation of the parents of the students of the university. We believe that your own interest in the perpetuation of democracy in student life at the University of Oregon will lead you to agree with us that the automobile should not accompany your son to the university."

Luxuries Not Needed
"Real scholarship at the University of Oregon demands a good proportion of the student's time and the normal recreation or college life will consume the rest of it. The moderate allowance needed by each university man should not include expenditures for such luxuries as the maintenance of an automobile."

Dean Shirrell declared that the university administration recognizes that the automobile "is a valuable and necessary feature of our modern life," but that "we cannot admit that it is a necessary part of student life. There are rare cases in which an automobile is a necessity to a student and we are glad to make exception in those cases."

In a letter to mothers of girl students, Miss Haze Prutman, acting dean of women, states that "an automobile operated by a girl student is a distinct liability."

A number of American universities have made hide-bound regulations against operation of automobiles by students during the school year, while others, especially those located in or near large cities, have found it impossible due to the fact that a large portion of the student body goes to the university campus by automobile from home, Dean Shirrell found in his survey of the student car situation.

The University of Illinois bans use of automobiles by students during the school term unless a permit is granted by the administration upon a written request from the student's parents. The University of Michigan has at present five people, including two state police officers, engaged exclusively in enforcing a similar regulation. The University of Indiana has also such a regulation.

Car Users Poor Students
At Princeton university, according to Christian Guass, dean of the college, it was found that the record of the group who had cars was considerably below the general college average. A strict regulation against use of cars was enforced, and the resulting record was, the dean declares to Dean Shirrell, "so very much better there, was really no comparison."

Among institutions which wrote that they have no regulations against use of cars, except for parking rules and the like, were the University of Minnesota, Stanford university, University of California at Los Angeles, the University of California, University of Colorado, University of Iowa, University of Southern California, University of Wisconsin, Southern Methodist university, and Ohio State university. At the latter school students conduct their own traffic court.

The University of Oregon has taken steps recently to limit parking on the campus, and Dean Shirrell indicated that it intends to take no more drastic steps at present.
