AMERICANISM

"Americanism is unflinching love of country; loyalty to its institutions and ideals; eagerness to defend it against all enemies; undivided allegiance to the flag; and a desire to secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity."

of local independence, which is even more important than the loss of local revenue. It means the sure throttling of state and local rights. And, carried far enough, it cannot help but mean the death of our governmental system, as we have known it.

YER TELLIN' US!

The Republican Party is in a difficult position, politically speaking. With national attention focused on foreign affairs and foreign policy, its leaders feel that a campaign waged on domestic issues would produce little but yawns from the electorate.

On top of that, the leaders seem to have been unable to find any important bones to pick with the Administration's present foreign and defence policies. Most of the leading Republicans, including Mr. Hoover, have endorsed Mr. Roosevelt's plans practically in toto. There are minor differences of opinion, but so far nothing big enough seems to have been produced on which to wage a national campaign.

WANTED:—$15,000

It was recently reported that Memphis, Tennessee, faced a new problem as the result of public ownership.

For many years the local electric company in Memphis contributed $15,000 each year to the Community Chest. A few months ago that company was taken over by the city for the purpose of redistributing T. V. A. power, and those contributions to charity ceased—government bodies seldom contribute to local welfare and civic activities.

That is a small thing—one town's charity problems don't fret the nation. But multiply the Memphis situation a thousand times or more and you'll get an idea of what will happen as the politicians socialize the power industry. In the average community, the power company is one of the largest financial contributors to all worthwhile welfare work. Power company officials and employees give freely in helping with such activities. They are vitally interested in what happens in their home town—vitality interested in making it a better place to live.

Socialized industry means the centralization of more and more in Washington. It means the loss

Street and Highway Lighting Safety Bureau, New York, N.Y. May 29, 1940.

Dear Editor:—For those not familiar with the facts, "sealed beam" is, today, really a generic term, defining the radically new type of lighting system which has become standard equipment on the 1940 models of almost every make of car. Sealed beam lighting is not the product, nor the trade or product name, of any particular manufacturer.

Though sealed beam lighting offers many advantages over the old type of lighting, and though it is, in many respects an important step towards safer driving at night, it does demand proper and intelligent use on the part of the motorist, particularly in the use of the "passing beam" when approaching other cars.

I had some hesitancy in turning out this issue of the caution series for fear that the above points might not be clear. However, the subject of headlighting is such a vital issue in the problem of night traffic safety that I felt it could not be overlooked.

HOCKING LIBERTIES

Freedom of press is one of the most vital of our liberties. Any move to curb the press in this country is doomed to crushing defeat.

Less spectacular, but just as vital to our liberty is private credit. Unless a man can secure credit in a competitive market to operate his business, he is no longer a free citizen. The local bank, for example, is far more than a safe depository. It is a private credit agency which is only too glad to loan money to worthy borrowers and otherwise serve the public—for the simple reason that it is a unit of a great competitive banking system.

A direct assault is being made on private credit. Government lending agencies by the score are steadily distributing millions upon millions of dollars to farmers, home-builders, business, at terms no private citizen can compete with. Every million thus distributed is a nail in the coffin of private credit. And yet, it takes no economist to follow absorption of private credit by government to its logical conclusion. Getting "in hock" to Government will, in the long run, destroy our liberties just as effectively as giving a government censor the key to every newspaper office in the land.

One need hold no brief for banking to realize the nation's banks are the very heart of the private credit system. And it takes no great imagination to foresee the inevitabilities of a government-dominated credit system. The private banker in his sphere of activity is as essential as freedom of the press in a democratic society.

Milkman Always Prepared For Notes On Doorstep

JUST a scribbled note and if you want an extra quart of milk tomorrow it will be there because one of the simplest operations in the household routine is turning the milk on or off at the doorstep.

Unexpected company arrives to spend the night. No need to stretch the cream. Just leave a note. Husband decides without warning on a weekend jaunt, so there will be nobody home till Monday. Just leave a note for the milkman.

Because this is a part of the accepted service of American milk distribution, most people take it as a matter of course. Whatever the pencilled note, the distributor's route man deposits the specified bottles.

It would be a different story in other parts of the world, says the Milk Industry Foundation. Along comes a local holiday or festival and you first know of it because the milk hasn't been delivered. Armed with a container you go foraging for milk. If lucky, you get a quart of doubtful sanitary history.

Otherwise, you take your coffee—and the remainder of the holiday—black with more chicory than cheer. What do you do in this country? When it's time for breakfast, you are not disappointed. Why should a mere blizzard stop the milkman? The more you think about it, the more you are inclined to accept the daily milk bottle on the doorstep as a symbol of civilized convenience impossible under antiquated methods in countries where dog carts, open cans and other laggard devices are employed.

Widespread daily U. S. milk consumption is probably due to dependability of doorstep distribution. Americans can't resist such efficient services, and who's to blame them?

DOES GOD ANSWER PRAYER?

—"I haven't been to church in fifteen years, but I don't mind telling you that I'm thinking of starting in again. I've been praying and it helps me." This man was quoted in The Oregonian of recent issue. The state of the World and the threat to all that we hold dear drove him to his knees. And having prayed he felt better. BUT DOES GOD ANSWER PRAYER?

Over in Galt, Ontario, the high school group that meets for Bible study had dwindled to a half dozen, and interest had fallen to a low ebb. In view of this run-down state of things, the visiting secretary from Toronto would see more prayer put back of the work. Calls were made about town and the spiritually minded were urged to pray.

The Lord has His people of vision and faith and for just such an hour and task as this. Here in Galt it was a woman and she began to plead that the Lord would revive His work among their young people. Some weeks passed but nothing seemed to be stirring. Yet God comes in, when we claim the promises. And behold! At length fourteen grown-ups about the city phoned the woman that they had begun to pray, also, and at the hour when the students had their weekly meet—on Wednesday noons. The next proof that God hears came on one of the following Wednesdays when for no seeming reason, the student group swelled to double size, with growth and interest mounting. And so, you see, GOD DOES ANSWER.

HOW GOD ANSWERS PRAYER: What God purposes to do He lays on the heart of His prayer people. He burdens them. By day and by night he whispers and urges and they come before Him with their cry. The very thing He waits to do, is picked up here and worked over into human speech and sent back to the throne, with Christ's name added. In His name the petition is granted.—"If ye abide in Me and My words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you," says Christ. ONE—Abide in Him. All sin confessed and blotted out. Forgiveness counted on since He promised it. If I hold on to sin the Lord will not hear me. See Ps. 66:18.

TWO—"My words abide in you," says He. By that you are posted on what He is waiting to do, And you ask according to His will, THREE—Now you pray in His name and you see the fruit. Are you the Christian who runs with the World or are you of the little prayer group by whom God brings to pass His mighty purposes?
