AMERICANISM
"Americanism is unfailing love of country; loyalty to its institutions and ideals; eagerness to defend it against all enemies; undivided allegiance to the flag; and a desire to secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity."

HAS NEVER HELD ANY PUBLIC OFFICE

The nomination of Wendell Willkie as the Republican candidate for president signified a triumph of aggressive public sentiment over machine politics. And on top of that it was a political miracle.

Mr. Willkie has never held a public office. Six or seven years ago he was virtually unknown, save in a limited industrial circle. Up to a year ago, the public had heard little or nothing about him. A few months before the convention some of the leading columnists began writing about him, observing that he would make a model candidate, but that, unfortunately, his complete lack of influential political backing made his nomination virtually impossible. Major newspapers editorially expressed similar views. Mr. Willkie was in other words, the darkest of dark horses, in a field filled with political luminaries long in the public eye. Apparently Mr. Willkie himself first took suggestions that he might be a candidate as flattering but rather idle conversation.

When the Willkie campaign got underway, it was run entirely by amateurs. His name was not entered in any state primaries—though he did receive a very large and purely voluntary write-in vote in some states. No delegate to the convention was really pledged to him. The comparative handful of votes he received on the first ballot came from unpledged delegates who, with the whole field to pick from, considered him the best man. And long before that ballot was polled it became evident that supposed Dewey and Taft strongholds were cracking fast in favor of Willkie. Some of the party leaders, finding their influence waning, organized an almost hysterical "stop Willkie" drive. It apparently only added to his support, and on the third ballot, when Dewey lost heavily, it was clear that Willkie was to be the man.

The obvious question is, What manner of man is this, who so dramatically licked the GOP bosses to a standstill? And the obvious answer is that he is very remarkable man indeed. No one doubts his intellectual capacity for the number one U. S. job. A Jeffersonian in his political philosophical philosophy, (he first voted Republican in 1932, when he became convinced that the New Deal had abandoned Democratic principles and was moving toward collectivism), he has done a magnificent job of publicizing the issue of the individual versus the state—he is unapologetically opposed to the government going into business in competition with its citizens, and to dictatorial government domination of the social and economic life of the nation. But in these days, intellectual capacity is not enough—other talents are needed, and Mr. Willkie has all of them too. As William Allen White has written, he is extremely photogenic—he is a big man, jovial in manner, with a leonine shaggy head. He is quick as they come on his mental feet, and has a highly developed sense of humor. As a speaker and radio platform personality, many think him even better than the President in this regard. He has a strong sense of drama, and a great aptitude for the telling phrase. In brief, seasoned political observers feel that he was the only GOP aspirant to possess the important physical as well as mental qualities needed to battle the strongest Democratic candidate on even terms.

The Republican platform says little and means less. That is not important. Mr. Willkie will make the platform himself, and no one in these days pays much attention to the political planks. While he believes in private enterprise, he believes also in a strict regulation and the iron handed elimination of business abuses. On foreign policy he has declared himself in favor of aid to the allies, but he is pledged against declaring war. He is especially strong in defense of civil liberties for minorities no less than majorities, and has also pointed out that if we are to assure the preservation of freedom, we must protect the freedom of those we abhor as well as those whose views we endorse. He detests Fascism, and all that it stands for.

The nomination of Senator McNary of Oregon for second place on the ticket was what the sporting fraternity call a natural. No Senator has such a strong following in the West, and in the all-important agricultural states. He is perhaps the ablest parliamentarian in the entire Congress, and is universally popular. His record as a minority leader during the GOP's leanest days has been excellent. He is a definite asset to the ticket.

Many experts are saying that the nomination of Mr. Willkie makes the renomination by a draft if necessary, of President Roosevelt almost certain. Reason is that the Democrats must now put their best foot forward and the President is their best foot by far. Mr. Willkie is far too strong a candidate, far too good a speaker for opposition by a colorless or routine candidate. If these forecasts come true, and colorful Mr. Roosevelt runs against colorful Mr. Willkie. It should be one of the most dramatic campaigns in the

KNOX AND STIMSON MEN OF ABILITY

Whatever else may be said of the appointment of two Republicans to the cabinet, it is offset by the fact that Colonel Knox and Mr. Stimson are men of exceptional abilities, and will strengthen a cabinet that, on the whole is regarded in Washington as weak.

Mr. Stimson is undoubtedly one of the ablest men who has served in the Cabinet since the World War.

The discussion about a coalition cabinet is an entirely different matter, on which, of course, the Republicans and Democrats violently disagree. And incidentally, it is a healthy matter for the country to find the two old parties running under their own steam once more.

ALL SWEAR BY ALL THAT'S HOLY

The United States government is as bewildered as the people and no one seems to know whether the spending of all these billions of dollars is for defense or war—or both. The officials of Congress and the Administration all swear by all that's holy that they are doing their level best to keep this country out of the war. Nevertheless, too many of these gentlemen now in Washington are carrying chips on their shoulders, and practically inviting the European dictators to knock them off.

The confusing thing is that politicians keep right on saying that no matter what happens in Europe it will be impossible for the victors in those massacres to put their military machine in order to make any attacks upon America for a year, if not for many years. They also knew, or admit, that the war orders that have been authorized cannot be turned out of the factories until machinery and tools are prepared for mass production, during the next six months.

If we are to believe half of all we are told, there is but one conclusion for us to draw—that the war will be postponed for years, if it comes at all.

So why not raise big farm crops this year? There will be a big export market in the Fall, at good prices. Exhausted Europe will have to eat.

INTEREST SHOWN IN THIS CAMPAIGN

There appears to be more interest in the Presidential campaign at this early date than there was at any time during the last campaign. Willkie seems to have as many schemes and new ideas as President Roosevelt. One or both of them may pull a new one nearly every day. Besides, mudslinging has already started among the die-hard politicians on both sides in Congress.

Let 'er go! It's time for the people to take a hand in public affairs, and pass upon the claims PROVIDED the nap has not been destroyed by violent or continued wear, dents made by pianos, furniture, etc., may be removed from a rug by covering the dented area with a damp cloth and then pressing firmly with a hot iron. The resulting moist heat causes the nap to spring back.

When dry, brush the nap briskly with a stiff brush.

Q.—Suggest a remedy for an upstairs shower stall which leaks through the tiles, spoiling the plaster ceiling below.

A.—A sheet-lead lining for the floor and corners of the stall will completely prevent leaks or seepage. Consult a licensed plumber concerning its installation.

Q.—What wood do you suggest for the frame of an extension bathroom, the walls and ceiling of which will be plastered?

A.—A rigid frame of pre-shrunk, dry dimension timber is highly recommended. The use of only well-seasoned lumber is your safeguard against the future cracking of the plaster.

Anyone of the several varieties of Western pine, Idaho white, ponderosa, or sugar, are suggested for this work.

Q.—Can vein-relief wall finishes be produced with paint and what formula do you suggest?

A.—A variety of beautiful vein-relief mural decorations are readily produced by striking wet plastic paint with the flat side of a 4 in. wall brush.

The best plastic paint is composed of 3 parts (by volume) soft paste white lead, 1 part dry whiting, 1 part flinting oil. Add 1/4 pt. liquid drier to paint prepared from 100 lb. paste white lead.

Apply the plastic paint as the finish coat over regular undercoats of white lead paint.

Q.—Is there difference in the composition of wall and floor tiling?

A.—Yes. Wall tiles have a soft base with surface coloring only, which is generally protected by a glaze. Floor tiles are hard and colored throughout.

HOW TO MAKE ICED COFFEE

FRESH HOT COFFEE is the first requisite for good iced coffee. Make it double-strength (two heaping tablespoons of coffee to each measuring cup of water) to allow for dilution by ice.

POUR FRESH COFFEE immediately into tall glasses filled with ice. To preserve full coffee flavor iced coffee should be served immediately after hot fresh coffee is poured over the ice.

A FROSTY GLASS of delicious iced coffee is the result. Serve it plain; with ice cream; or top it with whipped cream into which has been folded oil of cloves, powdered ginger or almond flavoring.
