CONSIDERING HOW TO CONTROL WEEDS

The most outstanding development in weed control in the past few years has been to prove definitely that perennial weeds can be killed by cultivation. Alternate summer fallow and wheat will kill morning glories. Nothing is lost by a year of grain or similar crops between years of summer fallow.

The best time to start cultivating Canada thistle in spring is when the thistles are 12 to 15 inches high, or from three to four weeks after they emerge in the spring. The repeat cultivations are given 10 days after they come through the ground. Ninety-five per cent kill or better has been obtained after one season of summer fallow with this method.

Preliminary tests in other states, now being tried in Oregon, indicate that successive of perennial weeds, such as white top and Canada thistle, will give better results than using chlorate. Refinements in the method will have to be made before it will be cheaper than chlorates on morning glory and the Russian knapweed.

Malheur, Deschutes, Umatilla, Wasco, Union and Baker counties have various degrees of a county-wide organization through the county court or weed control councils for weed control.

Weed infestation cultivation can start any time during the growing season. Eradication will probably be accomplished with one or two less cultivations, however, if the operations are started at the weak stage of the plant. For morning glory this appears to be about thirty days after emergence, but cultivation two or three weeks after emergence is probably safer.

A few of the Oregon county agents are conducting willing trials this season. Heretofore, most of the burning attempts have been aimed at completely consuming the plants, rather than to scar them. Best results in other states, however, have been obtained by leaving them so that they will not entirely wilt down for one or two days.

The Youth in Business

By C. E. Johnston

THE youth who is preparing himself for the world of business will do well to give attention to a new field of management responsibility. This field has to do with the production and distribution of goods and services in such a manner as to win public approval. Every major executive knows that buyers are concerned with more than just products and prices. Consumers are interested in how the conduct of business operations affects employees and the general public, in what may be termed the social aspects of business. Young men, as well as senior executives, should begin to think in terms of the social as well as the economic results of business.

Recently many industrial companies have held "open house" for their employees and their relatives and friends. This has been done in part to acquaint employees with the work performed in different divisions of the plant and in the factory as a whole. It has also been done to improve public relations. Holding "open house" is a means by which the community in which a concern is located is informed about the nature of its operations.

Today much attention is rightly given to the philosophy that underlies business management. The beginner in business, however, commonly misconceives the motives of the senior officials of his company. He is apt to think that the making of profits and the avoiding of losses is all that interests the "higher-ups". This is far from the case. An understanding of the true motives that move executives is essential to the young person

ENLIST FOR "TOTAL WAR"

Because of unprecedented drought and incendiary activities, Oregon faces the most serious forest fire menace of many years. Thoughtful citizens are rebelling against the carelessness, the apathy and criminal activity that permits this destruction of beauty and health and living things. If you wish to join in the "total war" against forest fires in your home state, sign the "enlistment" blank below:

State Forester, Salem, Oregon

I pledge myself to report to you any acts of carelessness or incendiaryism that I may see along the highways or in the forests of Oregon and to observe scrupulously myself these six rules for preventing fires—(1) Be sure your match is out, break it in two before throwing it away; (2) Extinguish cigarette, cigar and pipe sparks in ash tray provided in my car; (3) Build all camp fires in hole dug in ground. Clear all inflammable material from around camp-fire site; (4) Never leave camp before campfire is out—dead out; (5) Pour water or pack earth over campfire, stirring coals to make sure that every spark is absolutely extinguished; (6) Never burn brush or slash in windy weather. Get burning permit from fire warden or ranger.

KIWANIANS HEAR FAIR MANAGER

At their regular meeting Wednesday July 24, the Kiwanis were addressed by Leo G. Spitzbart, manager of the Oregon State Fair. The subject of his address was the fair. He said that the reason that "Johnny" would stay so long at the fair was that there would be a revivotype show in addition to the horse show. Mr. Spitzbart was accompanied by Glen Hoar of the State Department of Agriculture.

Hute Johnson the new manager of the Kiwanis softball team is hunting for those fifth columnists that stopped Bill Grauer from attending the last game. Hute thinks that the score for next Wednesday's game with West Slope should be limited to six dozen. Hute also says that there will be no more sitting down exercises. Some of the Kiwanis complained that Bill Grauer had limited their plate so well that they had lost weight.
