

WILLKIE YOUTH VIVIDLY SHOWN BY HIS SISTER

ST. CATHERINE'S Ontario.—Julia Willkie, older sister of Wendell Willkie, has been a resident of this town for several years. She is unmarried and has a good job as an industrial chemist here. In an interview today, she discussed the old days in Elwood.

"I think Wendell can swing the job of President," she said. "I say this because the boy is father to the man, and I have known both the boy and the man, more than most us. Wendell reflects his ancestors, his parents, his home."

"Ours was a working family, back in Elwood. From our earliest days, father urged us to work. He taught us 't was honest to one's self and dignified and really fun to work. When Wendell was 9 years old, he was a newspaper boy, and covered his route after school. He delivered the Elwood Daily Record and the Elwood Call-Leader."

"Wendell's first regular job, when he was 13, was driving a bread wagon. This he did evenings and Saturdays. His customers were farmers, and he utilized his job to learn all he could about land, livestock and farm problems. His salary was $3 a week, paid in cartwheel dollars."

"A few years later he and Brother Fred formed the Willkie Distributing Co., which distributed handbills, circulars, cards and samples."

"But Father was especially anxious to have the boys work among strangers. He told them to explore the country and find jobs for themselves. Every summer, he would give them carfare to some distant point and a few dollars extra."

"During these years, Wendell pitched hay in Wyoming, helped harvest wheat in Kansas, worked on fruit for an Indiana wholesaler, had a job as a laborer in Colorado beet sugar factory, was a baker for a circus in South Dakota."

"After Wendell graduated from college and before he went to law school, he worked a few years at various jobs. He taught school in Texas and became actively interested in boys' organization work. He obtained a position as a chemist in Porto Rico with the Salsado Sugar Co. and worked there a year. Then he returned to Indiana University for his law course. He practiced law in Father's office for a year, until he and Brother Bob enlisted as privates, the first men from Elwood to go to war. After he was demobilized in France, he came back and worked on the legal staff of the Firestone Tire Co."

"Wendell is the most honest person I ever met. There isn't an ounce of pose or affectation in him. I think people instinctively recognize that quality in him. Ever since his earliest days, he has had a tremendous drive—an impetus to conquer the task before him."

says:

Beware the government, however virtuous, that demands 100 percent acquiescence. The difference between a good tyrant and a bad one is only a difference in time.

Anything you may do at this time to shake the confidence of the great mass of the American people in either the President or the National Government is a sin against free enterprise, individual liberty, political democracy and your own self-interest.

EXPERT JUDGES PRIZE WINNER

Forgetting politics for a while, Wendell Willkie inspects a prize winner, comparing it with some of the stock on his own Rush County farms.

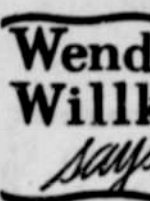

Wendell Willkie
says:

I am not interested in the support of anybody who stands for any form of prejudice as to anybody's race or religion, or who is in support of any foreign economic or political philosophy in this country.

The true liberal is as much opposed to excessive concentration of powers in the hands of government as to excessive concentration in the hands of business. In other words, he maintains his freedom against all comers.

Unfortunately, because government rarely relinquishes a power which it has once obtained, the emergency character of depression measures was shortly disregarded; the government embarked upon vast continuing spend-lead programs designed not to promote private enterprise but to promote direct financial and economic activity by the government.

says:

I dedicate myself to three things: One, a united people without class consciousness, distinction or class hatred; Two, the rehabilitation of our national economic life; Three, the building of an adequate defense system.

Pressure upon the press is a favorite weapon by which the Administration seeks to silence the opposition—and to the credit of the press, it is generally a futile one.

I call on you to join me, not in a political campaign, but in a great crusade to restore America to its true tradition so that it may stand before the world as a great, united and strong country.

Unity of our people, rehabilitation of our economic life, and the building of an adequate defense are indispensable to the preservation of our way of life.

made by the fair sex. That is a very high proportion when you think that, even in these days of equal rights, the great majority of wage earners are men.

The ladies deserve praise for their foresight. No one ever devised an economic protection for the individual, male or female, one half so effective, safe and certain as life insurance.

THE FAT MEN ARE FOR IT—

The other morning a Washington correspondent listened to an enthusiastic appeal over the radio in behalf of intensive military training. He happened to know the commentator, who is a nice, fat old boy long past the age at which soldiers are recruited. Then it occurred to him that these over-weights and not the youngsters are the ones most enthusiastic about intensive training. This incident can be applied to most commentators throughout the entire nation.

In this connection it might not be out of place to tell of a rule said to have been applied in a certain hunting camp. It was to the effect that the first man who found fault with the grub should be immediately given the cooking to do.

It is said that the cooking in that camp was without fault.

And by the same token, it is our suggestion that the fellows who shout for intensive training be trained first.

Me Up For Murder!

With the passing years, the scene grows ever more vivid. The Judge was on my side but he could do nothing. In fact, he himself had laid down the law and by it I must die. It seemed as though all who ever lived in heaven or on earth, had their eyes on the Judge that day. If he had weakened out of love for me, the moral order of the universe would have cracked.

"Guilty!" So came the verdict. I must go out with the lost forever. Then it happened. The Judge had an only Son. He stepped forward. Such a man! Fearless, wise, tender-hearted, for little children ran to his arms; hard toward the proud and self-righteous; wisdom—the doctors of the law sat awed at his judgments and the common people hung on his words as he drew back the veil and sketched the favors and riches he had for the humble. And this Son offered to step in and take my place and die for me.

Cleared By Another

He was tempted at every point like I, yet He did no sin. He alone, of all who ever walked the earth, had earned Eternal life by sinless days. He need not have died. And so He offered to take my place and for love of me the Father gave Him up. You see Him bearing His cross and going forth to a place called Golgotha where they Crucified Him and two thieves with Him, the one on either side and Jesus in the midst.

Me guilty of murder? Yes, and theft and all the rest. For, "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he," says the Bible.—"God looketh on the heart" and what he sees there he would not want spread on the front page of the morning paper. Yet it all goes down in the book of God's remembrance. The lost dead are to stand before the great white throne and give answer for the things written in the books.

But for all who have the God-given faith to reach out and lay hold on Christ, their sins are blotted out and their names put in the Book of Life. And God puts His Spirit into their hearts to make them Christ-like within, without. Have you pled with God for the faith to lay hold on Christ as the Substitute who died for you?

XMAS SEAL SALE TO START EARLY

Mrs. Helen Austin, president of the Washington County Public Health association, announces that Mrs. Harry Morgan has again accepted the appointment of County Christmas Seal Sale Chairman for the sale which begins last week in November.

To assist with plans to conduct the sale by mail this year, Miss Elsie Winters, Christmas Seal Secretary, of the Oregon Tuberculosis association, recently conferred with Mrs. Morgan, Mrs. R. L. Ervin of Forest Grove, Mrs. Leslie Long of Cornelius and Mrs. C. O. Mabey of Aloha.

Though a county-wide mail sale is a new venture in Washington county, it is being used with marked success in neighboring counties, according to Miss Winters, who discussed a few of the preliminary steps necessary to the success of such a sale and ways in which the State Office can help.

Mrs. Morgan is completing committee appointments and formulating plans for a county-wide campaign which will be part of a nation-wide drive to finance the great peace battle against tuberculosis. "Citizens of our county, we know, will respond generously to this appeal," says Mrs. Morgan. "Tuberculosis is still a health problem of large proportions in the United States. Last year the disease claimed the lives of approximately 38,000 young people between the ages of 15 and 45, and considerably more than half of all deaths from tuberculosis during those years."

Mrs. Morgan has appointed Mrs. M. C. McKercher as local Seal Sale Chairman for Beaverton and they are looking forward to a very successful sale which takes place between Thanksgiving and Christmas.

STATE BOARD BUSY ON COMPLAINTS

The State Department of Agriculture reports considerable activity in investigating complaints against produce dealers and alleged violations of the Oregon produce law. As a result, a number of produce dealers have been invited to conferences in the department offices and one citation to a hearing to show cause why the dealer's license should not be revoked has been issued.

SPECIALIST FROM COLLEGE COMING

"Floor and Seated Games" will be the subject of discussion at a meeting to be held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms in Hillsboro, Friday, October 11, at 8:00 p.m. Miss Izola Jensen, Recreation Specialist from Oregon State college will conduct this meeting at which new ideas for entertaining groups will be discussed.

Anyone interested in recreation is invited to attend, according to Kathleen McCrea, Home Demonstration Agent.

WOMEN AND LIFE INSURANCE

Women, according to well substantiated legend, know a good thing when they see it. And that seems to be true when it comes to building up savings, no less than in buying clothes or decorating a home.

More than 17,000,000 women are owners of life insurance. In a recent year about 20 percent of all life insurance purchases were
