AMERICANISM

"Americanism is unflinching love of country; loyalty to its institutions and ideals; eagerness to defend it against all enemies; undivided allegiance to the flag; and a desire to secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity."

U.S. Naval Training Station
San Diego, California.
January 18, 1941.

The Editor,
Beaverton Review,
Beaverton, Oregon.

Dear Sir:

Shirley Samuel Livingston, whose home is in your city, has been selected as the Honor Man of his company by his instructors at this station for the week ending January 18, 1941.

Livingston enlisted in the Navy at the Navy Recruiting Station in Portland, Oregon, on December 18, 1940. Since that time he has been learning the necessary qualifications to fit himself for a career as a man-of-war's man.

At this station it is the custom to select every week the one man for each company of one hundred and forty one recruits, among whom he has shown by his outstanding ability, his zeal and his loyalty, that he is worthy of this special designation.

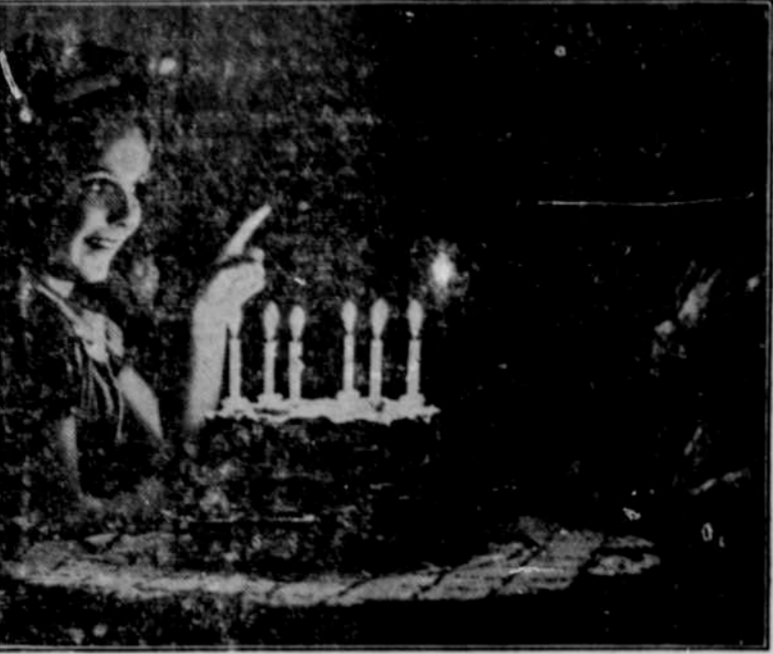

Friends of this young man, and of his parents, will be happy to learn that he is adapting himself so nicely to the high standards which the modern Navy has set for its bluejackets, and that he has started on his Naval career with such distinctive promise.

Respectfully,
A. B. Schulten, Commander,
U.S. Navy, Training Officer.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

FUN WITH LIGHTING

High speed film—candles not too far from the subject—lens set at f/6.3—and a one-half second time exposure got this perfectly. Be sure to use a firm camera support for "time" shots.

WE HAVE had a lot of fun at our house recently, taking pictures with unusual types of light and lighting. It all began with our first side shots—using flood bulbs tucked back in the fireplace to simulate firelight.

From these fireplace shots—they were good ones, too—we proceeded to candlelight and lamplight. For shots by candlelight, we used real candles. Some were in branched candelabra—which are very attractive in pictures—and for one series, we arranged a birthday party with a cake and small candles. It wasn't anybody's birthday, really—but a cake had just been baked for Sunday, and we managed to borrow it.

Of course, candlelight is rather weak—so we used high speed film and time exposures. By having several candles, and placing the subjects quite near them (but not too close for safety) we were able to make exposures of one-half to one second at f/6.3. That would be two to four seconds with a box camera—and, don't forget, high speed film. Daytime film is much slower by the yellow candlelight.

We used two lamps in our lamplight pictures. One was a kerosene lamp, with an interesting old-fashioned design, that we found in the attic. With that one, we got good results at the same exposures used for candlelight. The other lamp had a chimney and base, like the oil types, but was wired for an electric bulb. When Ann held the lamp, she shielded the bulb with her hand—and we concealed the electric cord, too—so the results were quite realistic.

Exposures were shorter for our electric lamp—but the time will always depend on the wattage of the bulb, and its distance from the subject. That's the point to keep in mind when you try these special shots. The nearer the subject, the stronger the light. It works the same way when you use photo bulbs. Candles one foot from a subject are four times as efficient as they would be when two feet from the subject.

I'm sure you'll want to try some of these shots. The nice point about them is that you can have the lamp or candles right in the picture. Sometimes, possibly, you might get a reflection spot or "flare spot" on the film—but we didn't. And anyway, the shots are so interesting they're well worth that slight risk.

For Women's Eye

"How many miles today?"
"Oh, three hundred. Spokane by tonight."
"Okay. See you at the game Saturday."

And the young miss steps on the gas and is off. The world is at your feet, Miss America—Queens of old never dreamed of such fullness of life and yet in spite of all, there is a black cloud off there on the edge of your sky. Just as the sawmill must have logs to feed on, so the liquor business and the night life must have you and yours to fill the ranks. That is the cloud, the threat that you will find yourself a castaway when the years have added their total.

So we speak to the mothers. The answer is a lot with you, and if you will have the record of two women who did a good job at this holy business of upbringing a youth, turn to the Bible. It was a boy this time and years later the Apostle Paul sends him this line when he had become Timothy, the churchman, "I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois and thy mother Eunice; and I am persuaded in thee also." The Bible is now read in hundreds of languages and the good work of these two women of old, grandmother and mother, Lois and Eunice, is a challenge to womenkind the world round.

Babes In Arms
You cannot begin too young. Many a strong man or woman was taken to church as a babe in arms. Even then they begin to sense it that there is a Higher Power. "One half of all you do for your child will be finished by the time it is three and a half years old," says Horace Mann, the great educator. For a standard of conduct teach them the Ten Commandments—"Thou shalt not steal; kill; commit adultery; bear false witness; covet; worship any other than the true God." And where will they find the inner power to live out the holy law except they receive into their lives the Saviour who fulfilled the law and died for our scorn of it? Now hear that Lover of all mankind, "Suffer the little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of God."

Us was chewing the fat with some of the fellows down at the whitening bench at the corner when the question of women in politics got going.

"Now take the Legislature," sez I, "Very few women know a thing about parliamentary law." "Huh, you don't know my wife," sez George, "she's been speaker of the house for the past twenty years."

Here it is—the second year of "The Roaring 40's" and we have not even begun to roar.

INTERLUDE

The nightingales are silent
In England, I am told,
Singing no more at dusk
By field and wold.

The Skylarks still are singing
In England in the day;
The sunshine having cleared
The mists of hate away.

But there shall come still twilight,
Sweet with Peace, and men
Shall hear the nightingales
Singing again.

It Says Here That:
Blonds were invented to keep married life from running too smoothly.

Coupe De Grace.

Oily Joe was a passenger aboard the stage. Both Joe and the stage were loaded to capacity. Joe's seat partner was a clergyman who refused to talk. With a low, quavering voice calculated to draw the parson into the conversation, Joe drawled:

"I ain't goin' to heaven. There ain't no heaven."
No answer.

"I say, there ain't no heaven. I ain't goin' to heaven, Joe loudly shouted.

Then the parson replied calmly, "Very well, go to hell then, but please be quiet about it."

It used to be an insult to offer a floozie a drink; now she just swallows the insult.
