VETERANS HAVE PARTY MARCH 17

Last Monday evening, March 17, the members of the Beaverton United Spanish War Veterans Post 31 and the Ladies Auxiliary No. 25 gathered at their hall and journeyed by caravan to the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Haley at Bethany. While the party was in the nature of a surprise, the Haleys graciously arose to the occasion and opened a warehouse for dancing. A committee was thereupon dispatched for music and brought back Mr. and Mrs. L. H. MacIntyre. Mac competently played his accordion for both modern and square dancing while tables for bridge and pinochle were provided for those not dancing. A good crowd attended and everyone enjoyed this evening of fun.

While the Beaverton camp is comparatively young, being organized less than a year ago, it has the reputation of having very pleasant social affairs. For that reason several persons not connected with the local camp were present. Among these were: Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Foster from Oregon City, Mr. and Mrs. C. Thomas of McMinnville, Dan Mears of Los Angeles, Mrs. J. E. Morback of Sherwood, Mrs. L. E. Flett of Portland and Mr. and Mrs. Warren G. Haley of Huber.

Members and wives who made the trip were: Messrs and Mesdames John Justice, Harley Barton, C. J. Redfield, L. J. Van Court, S. M. Cole, A. T. Cavanaugh, O. C. Gilstrap and Dr. H. A. Putnam.

NYA HEALTH PROGRAM UNDERWAY

In Beaverton, the NYA health program for Oregon youths is well underway, according to I. G. Munro, state administrator, who received a report from Dr. Arch W. Dark, state health consultant of the project.

Complete physical appraisals are being given Beaverton youth by Dr. C. E. Mason, a member of the state health consultant's staff.

The NYA health program, approved by the council, Oregon State Medical society, is designed to improve the physical fitness of young men and women eligible for, or working on local NYA work experience projects.

The idea behind this statewide project is promotion of the health habits of all youths through health education with a view of establishing the highest standards of physical fitness attainable for Beaverton young men and women, to help strengthen the nation's vital defenses, Munro said.

To accomplish this objective all available resources of the NYA and local facilities are being used.

DEMONSTRATIONS TO BE GIVEN

A schedule of Rodent Control demonstration meetings has been announced by Palmer Torvend, assistant county agent, for Friday, March 28th. Roy Fugate, District Agent of the Division of Predator and Rodent Control, U. S. Department of Interior, will assist with the demonstrations, which will deal with effective methods of controlling the various rodents.

Friday's meetings, which have not previously been announced, are as follows: the Fred Jossy farm, near the Germantown Road at 9:00 a.m.; the Joe Cawse farm, one fourth mile north of the Schefflin Creek, at 10:30 a.m.; the Bert Heesacker farm one-half mile south of Kansas City, at 1:00 p.m.; and the J. F. Kamna farm, one-half mile north of the golf course, near Blooming, at 2:30 p.m.

HILLSBORO GETS NEW TURBINE

A deep well turbine with a capacity of 200 gallons per minute, and a smaller centrifugal pump, to serve as a booster unit, have been purchased by the city utilities commission, for installation at Hillsboro's newly completed well near the Masonic home.

A concrete encasement and pumphouse for the equipment is to be constructed by city labor, according to J. W. Barney, city manager. The well is to be placed in service as an auxiliary water source by early summer, in order that the municipal water system there may provide an increased water supply for city users.

LANDSCAPE PICTURES

A good foreground, interesting material in the distance, and a filter to reduce haze and bring out the clouds—these are the secrets of interesting scenic shots for your album.

PICTURES of outdoor scenes form an important part of your album, and opportunities for these landscape pictures can be found wherever you go. However, to make the most of an outdoor scene, here are some points to keep in mind.

First, always include a foreground—especially when you shoot broad, open scenes. "Foreground" simply means something of interest near the camera. If you are on a hilltop, and want to picture the valley below, don't stand at the very edge of the hill. Back up a little way so that you can include a tree or a guard rail—or better still, a person admiring the scene.

Second, when you shoot distant scenes always use a color filter if there is the least bit of haze in the air. With the popular types of "chrome" and "pan" films, a yellow filter will show the scene just about as you see it; but without a filter, the distant parts may seem too hazy. For great clearness in distant scenes, use a deep yellow G filter; or use "pan" film and a red A filter.

Third, don't overlook pleasing nearby bits of landscape. The broad distant scenes appeal to the eye—but often small scenes make more attractive pictures. A curving brook, a little waterfall, a pasture corner formed by an interesting stone wall or rail fence, a turn in a country road with overhanging trees—all these can yield delightful pictures, when you choose your camera position with care.

The camera position has a great deal to do with the success of your scenic shots. Note the picture above. The fisherman makes a good spot of interest in the foreground, the mountains lend interest in the distance, and a filter brought out the clouds. However the picture would be still better if the camera had been held lower and nearer the fisherman. That would narrow the strip of water, and bring the man's head higher in the picture space—thus breaking the straight, level water line in the distance.

Remember these points in shooting scenic pictures—a filter, a foreground, and a well-chosen camera position. Practice landscape shooting in the late summer and autumn months, and be ready for winter scenes later. Good scenic shots add value to your album—no matter what their season.
