3. F. Jones for Circuit Judge

Toledo, Oregon, Oct. 4th, 1910—3. F. Jones, Republican candidate for circuit judge of the 2d judicial district, was born on a farm near Lawrence, Douglas Co., Kan., February 24, 1858. In 1866 his father died and he came to Oregon with his widowed mother, and settled on the Yaquina Bay in Benton county, where the town of Toledo now stands.

His mother died two years later, and for the next six years he spent the summer time in working in the logging camps of Douglas and Benton counties on the Umpqua and Yaquina bays and going to school in the winter time, acquiring his education in the public schools and at Corvallis College. He then followed steam boating for ten years, working from deck hand to captain, and thus acquiring a thorough knowledge of Oregon's waterways. He served as county clerk for Lincoln county for three terms, during which time he studied law under the late Judge John Kelsey, and in 1897 was admitted to practice in all the courts of Oregon, since which time he has been actively engaged in the practice of law.

He represented Polk and Lincoln counties in the legislature for three terms, 1903, 1907 and 1909. He introduced the Demurrage Car Shortage bill in the session of 1903, which was defeated, and again in the session of 1907, introduced it, and being a member of the committee on railroads, had it incorporated into the Railroad Commission Bill, of which he was one of the strongest supporters.

In the session of 1907, he introduced what is known as the Jones Free Locks Bill appropriating $300,000, conditioned that the government would appropriate a like sum for either the purchase of the old or the building of new locks at the falls on the Willamette River at Oregon City.

At the same session he introduced a bill, and it became a law, repealing the former attempted act of the legislature, and acts amendatory thereto, granting to the Oregon Pacific Railway Company all the tide and overflowed lands on the Alsea, Siletz and Yaquina bays, aggregating about 20,000 acres of tide and overflowed lands, on the grounds that the legislature had no right to donate state lands to private individuals or corporations; and for the further reason that the railroad company has not, in thirty years, paid any taxes on the land, or complied with other conditions of the law.

In 1908 Mr. Jones filed two suits before the State Railroad Commission in the interests of the public; one against the Pacific Express Company and the other against the Wells Fargo Express Company, charging that their express rates were unreasonable, unjust and unlawful. These cases have both been decided against the express companies and their rates reduced twenty per cent., thus saving annually to the people of Oregon many thousands of dollars. He is well qualified for the position.

He was nominated without opposition, believes in the primary law, and a square deal for everyone, no matter what their position in life may be.

Why Not Woman's Suffrage.

(An address given recently at the Y. M. C. A. hall, Portland, by Clarence True Wilson, D. D.)

When two armies face each other in battle the army of aggression, before it can engage the main body, must drive in the skirmish lines of the enemy. The woman's suffrage propaganda has thrown out certain skirmish lines in the public thought and these must be driven in before we can come to the main argument. First, then, those who claim that the ballot is woman's right quote from the declaration of independence that "Taxation without representation is tyranny." But the quotation is not in point, for that sentiment was uttered with no possible reference to the individual voters, male or female. It was a declaration of the representatives of the 13 colonies that unless these colonies could have a representative in the parliament and in the cabinet to protect their interests King George should not ask us to pay duty. It had no reference to the casting ballot, for men voted in every colony, but it was a declaration that one government ought not to tax another without due representation.

PROTECTION FOR WOMEN.

In order to make it refer to woman's suffrage it would have to be proven that women are not now properly represented by their husbands, fathers or brothers; that the government does not protect them in their property interests, and that they do not get value received for their money.

The question of voting has no reference to the paying of taxes. We pay our taxes in return for the protection to life and property, by the laws of a civilized nation. Some men who have no property vote and many who have no vote pay large taxes. Numerous young men and women, heirs to large estates, pay immense sums to the government, but have no vote. Corporations pay immense sums in taxes, but have no vote. People residing in foreign lands or have lived in this country only a few years pay taxes, but have no vote. In fact voting has no reference whatever to taxes.

A QUEER TOURNAMENT

By ANDREW C. EWING
Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association

"How is it, Mr. Martindale," said Miss Ashby, "that you men talk to each other as you do? Whenever you and your chum, Mr. Warren, are together you say all sorts of mean things to each other, but I don't see that either of you gets angry."
"Oh, we understand each other."
"I wonder if Sadie and I could do that."
"No, you couldn't without quarreling."
Miss Ashby was silent for a moment, then said, "I'm going to try."
"I'll bet you a pound of candy against a cigar that you quarrel."
"I'll take the bet."
It was agreed between us that the two girls should have a talking tournament while they played a game of tennis. Dick Warren to furnish remarks for Miss Blanchard, to be thrown in occasionally, and I to do the same for Miss Ashby. Umpires were appointed, and we all met by appointment at the court.

We permitted the girls to play for awhile without furnishing any remarks, during which time they said what they considered very trying things to each other, laughing all the while and congratulating themselves on their ability to maintain good humor. After the first set had been played Dick and I, each standing by the girl he was to talk through, began to put in an occasional word, producing the following bits of dialogue:
"You give me another ball like that," said Miss Ashby, "and I'll swipe you with my racket."
Miss Blanchard only smiled.
"Now you're showing your rhinoceros tusk," pursued Miss Ashby.
Miss Warren ceased to smile. Indeed, she looked very sober. The tooth referred to was a blemish to her beauty. Dick made her retort.
"That remark was one of your own. You weren't told to say it at all. I think it real mean of you."
"Dunce!" cried Miss Ashby at my suggestion, claiming 10 points more than she was entitled to.
"You know very well its 30-40. What do you want to grab points like that for?"
"If you knew," retorted the other, "what a mad looking thing you were when you said that you'd put your head to soak."
Miss Blanchard tried to laugh, but was too sensitive to laugh at a remark which was untrue.
"I say, Clara," she said when her opponent failed to take a ball she served, "if you'd stop looking sweet at Mr. Martindale you'd play a better game. Everybody knows what you're up to in that direction."

Dick scored one in putting that remark into Miss Blanchard's mouth. Miss Ashby threw down her racket. "I don't care," she said. "It doesn't make any difference whether you were prompted to say that or not; you had no right to say it." Her face was fiery red, and her eyes were snapping.
Miss Blanchard had not got over the remark about her tusk and seemed to take a malicious pleasure in saying what Dick told her to say, sometimes breaking into short bits of irritating laughter.

"Sadie, if you don't stop that giggling you'll drive me crazy," I made Miss Ashby remark.
"Oh, don't be silly! You're making a poor show of yourself. You should have brought a handglass."
"You'd better have brought one yourself," retorted Miss Ashby. "If you had you'd have kept your tusk hidden."

Miss Blanchard dropped her racket and strode off the field.
"I didn't suppose," she said hotly, "that this was to be a tournament of insults."

Miss Ashby followed her, walking erect and with great hauteur. "I think you two men had better finish it," she said.

"Done!" exclaimed both Dick and I, and, picking up the rackets, we began to play and to chaff. We both have physical defects and did not refrain from delicate mention of them.

"Now I'm going to take you in the bald spot on your forehead," from Dick.

"And I'll knock one of those spindle pins from under you. Forty-thirty."

"Thirty-forty, you mean. Pity your first baby lessons were in lying."

"You know very well you've just out of jail for perjury."

"Now I'm going to put a ball between those bow legs of yours. I could throw a barrel between 'em."

"Which eye are you looking at me with—the upper or the lower?"

When we had sent these delicate compliments for awhile we threw our arms around each other and kissed, after the European fashion, on both cheeks. This we did to show our superiority in the matter of good nature to the girls. The umpire decided that I had won the bet, but sentenced me to pay it.

"I have no desire whatever," said Miss Ashby, tossing her head, "to excel at any such game."
"Nor have I," Miss Blanchard chimed in.

"I'll admit," I said by way of apology, "that it's far more pleasant for friends to say nice things to each other."
