Boy Criminals.

FROM 65 to 75 per cent of the criminals going through the courts in Chicago are mere boys. Such is the statement of a Chicago Municipal Judge.

The statement surprises no city dweller who is at all familiar with police court records. It may be that in Chicago there is a higher per cent age of youthful offenders than in most other cities; but that is simply because Chicago is larger than most other cities, and greater population means more crime of all classes. The city is untortunately the univer sity in which crime is taught to the youth of both sexes, and the most serious of civic problems is to discover the means by which such tuition may be lessened or discontinued.

Under the pressure of dollar getting activities, so fiercely prosecuted in cities, there is demoralization of the home as an institution that should provide proper training for the boy. The space to live in the cities sells at such a high premium that there isn't room to create a home ot the old-fashioned sort. The intensive demands of business and industry are such that there is not time for the maintenance of that old-time discipline in the home circle which taught the cardinal virtues of obedience to elders and respect for the rights of others. The social life ls so vitiated by entertainment and amusement of a questionable or of an absolutely demoralizing nature that the need for a stronger home where a weaker one exists is painfully apparent.

Optimistic people have faith in that evolution that will finally bring into being the model city. If that ever arrives it will be a city wherein the unit of chief concern will be the home, or where substitute must answer, the best substitute therefor that can be devised. It will be our duty sooner or later to build cities with other objects in view than solely that of attaining to commercial dignity and importance. It is in the city that we are educating the boy to a career of crime, and it is in the city that such pernicious teaching must be stopped, or society will one day be overwhelmed. As the home is to the boy, so will the boy be to society. As a matter of civic regard, the home is of far more importance than factories, banks, docks, and warehouses.—Portland Telegram.

Political Influence of Women

(By Miss Alice Hill Chittenden of New York.)

One of the fundamental differences between the suffragists and Anti-suffragists as I see it, is, that the former clings to the belief that the ballot in itself is a panacea for all existing evils and all powerful as a remedial agent of government, while the latter recognizes, in these opening years of the 20th Century, the development of a power more potent than the ballot—a power which at present we call educated or enlightened public opinion. The ballot hasn't solved our child labor problem and never will. The ballot hasn't solved the negro trouble, it has tended rather to complicate it, but an awakened public opinion has decreed that these problems and others akin to them shall be taken out of the realm of politics and be considered and dealt with from an economic and humanitarian point of view, and this is being done through the conferences and congresses on child labor, the care of dependent children, tuberculosis and other questions, which are being held throughout this country to-day. And in these conferences the woman's voice is heard equally with the man's. She isn't excluded from participation in such work because she hasn't a vote, neither is her influence lessened as a member of these committees for that reason. Here is a great field of activity and usefulness for woman, a real chance to serve the state.

I do not hesitate to say that those of us who are opposing the extension of suffrage to our sex, entirely eliminate the personal element in our consideration of this subject. It is not a question of whether we want to vote or do not want to vote.

We have the welfare and development of our country at heart and after a studious contemplation of the gouernmental principles involved, we are firmly convinced that such a "revolutionary change" as Mr. Gladstone called woman suffrage, would be against the best interest of the state, its women and the home, and would be a step backward rather than one in advance.

A man in public life when interviewed this winter on the subject of woman suffrage said: "Somewhere within the borders of this country to day there are mothers who are bringing up four Presidents, one hundred cabinet officers, three hundred Senators and five thousand representatives, who, between the years of 1930 and 1950, will be making the history of this country and measurably the history of the world."

Woman can have her share in politics if she will. The ballot isn't all. The mere bailot she is so eager to clutch, doesn't, in the balance of politics, count for more than an ounce in a ton.

A Strawberry Pest.

ED. RECORDER.—To those who raise strawberries for their private use or for market, I will give a word of warning. Within the last two years "Nomatodes," a very small, white worm, has made its appearance around Bandon. So far it has been found only in three different patches, and close together The worm may be transplanted by getting strawberry plants from such infected patches.

The Nomatodes live in the soil. It goes into the roots, plant, up into the stem and limbs, causing lumps to grow, called "Galls." and shows in the leaf by raising the surface. The leaf shows red, brown and white spots, the fruit, if any, is so poor that it can not be used.

Prof. Jackson of the Agricultural department, to whom I sent different samples writes me that this worm never before has been found in strawberries and nothing is yet known that will kill it except the destruction of the plant by fire. In large fields he recommends to take out all plants and sow grain for a number of years and thus starve the worm out.

It increases fast and it is to the interest of each and every strawberry grower to watch for such symptoms as given above.
