"FIFIELD"—The "ONLY WAY."

J. E. Walstrom and B. C. Martin went to Myrtle Point Monday afternoon on business and will return to day.

Wanted—Girl or woman to do house work. Apply at RECORDER office.

Miss Pearl Axtell is up from Port Orford for a short visit with her sister and other relatives.

WANTED—$1,000 for 3 years at 10 per cent. interest. Land security. Inquire at this office.

The Ladies' Thimble Club will be entertained Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Fred Tuttle.

Prepare to attend the big carnival in San Francisco in December. Make your reservations on the star "FIFIELD" in time.

Ray Bowman came over from Marshfield Saturday to visit at his home until after election. Ray has a very fine position in Marshfield.

Don't forget that T. W. Robison is handling all kinds of hay, grain, feed, etc., at the very lowest prices.

Miss Blanche Stitt, and J. S. Scheible and son Guy, visited friends in Springfield, Saturday, returning Tuesday.—Monmouth Herald.

Place your orders at once for all kinds of grass seed, seed grains, etc. with T. W. Robison, at Central Warehouse.

C. R. Langley, of Coos Bay, manager of the Coos Bay Home Telephone Co., is in the city looking after the business of this company.

To-day is a holiday for the Bandon public school, as the Oregon laws give the teachers that day. It is also a legal holiday for banks, and the Bandon Banks are consequently closed.

WANTED—To trade fine residence property in Myrtle Point for residence property in Bandon. Address Don, P. O. Box 498, Eugene, Oregon.

Rev. R. Sumerlin of North Bend, evangelist for the United Brethren of Coos county, was a Bandon visitor the latter part of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Wade, who have been spending their honeymoon at Pendleton and other Oregon points, returned last Friday and are now at home to their many friends in the Lewin house on the plank road.

J. J. O'Neil, a former Bandon resident and booster is now in the coal business at Portland, and we understand is doing very well. Mr. O'Neil's many Bandon friends will be glad to hear of his successful career.

STRAYED OR STOLEN—From my place in East Bandon, Saturday, October 22d, Jersey cow, white and yellow spotted. Right horn slightly drooped, also red calf with muzzle on. Suitable reward will be given to person furnishing information or delivering the same to J. H. Gould, in O'Neil's Addition to Bandon.

Tickets for the K. P. Ball which will occur on evening of Nov. 19th, are now ready and will soon be on sale at the following business houses of this city: Arc Light Bowling Alleys, Mars' Confectionery Store, The Sugarie, The Eldorado, Reynold's Barber Shop, Coomeil Christensen Co., O. A. Trowbridge and R. H. Rosa Co. Members of the committees having the affair in charge will also be able to furnish tickets to any persons desiring to purchase them.

On the inner trains on our best railroads, as a finishing touch to all that can be supplied to the public, and to make their service as nearly perfect as possible, the railroad companies equip their standard cars with hot and cold running water. In this section of the country we have the "FIFIELD" to take the place of those trains, and it supplies, as do the trains, hot and cold running water in every stateroom. You will find it a luxury in this kind of weather.

See the "Hoodoo" at the Grand to-night.

See at phone L. J. Radley for all kinds of Fire Wood.

Mrs. Mabel Hayter, of this city, who has been seriously ill for the past two weeks, was enough better yesterday to sit up for a short time.

Biograph at the Grand to-night, "Banker's Daughter."

Call on M. A. Norton at Lint's Studio, for graining or sign painting.

Capt. O. Wiren, co operative observer reports the rainfall for the 24 hours closing at 6 o'clock last night, as 1.26 inches, but the weather is fine to-day for the election.

FOR SALE—Five room cottage and furniture, and two lots. Best location in town. Close in. Inquire of Nels Rasmussen.

M. J. McKenna, treasurer and book-keeper of the Geo. W. Moore Lumber Co. of this city, who has been making an extended visit to eastern points, returned last Saturday.

W. W. Deyoe came down from Myrtle Point to visit his family and cast his vote at the election to-day. Mr. Deyoe will return to Myrtle Point soon and remain a couple of weeks, after which he will be at home again for the winter.

A benefit dance will be given at Oriental Hall tomorrow night for James Nygren who had his leg broken recently at the Geo. W. Moore Lumber Co.'s mill. This is a very worthy cause and should receive the hearty support of all Bandon people. Go and help the good cause along.

Among the prominent Coos County men who registered at the Gallier last night, and who were here for the closing of the campaign, were H. Lockhart, E. A. Monson, Tom T. Bennett, Judge John S. Coke, John Yoakam, republican candidate for sheriff, all of Coos Bay, and James Watson, of Coquille, present county clerk and candidate to succeed himself.

Travel is perfectly safe between Bandon and San Francisco at all times of the year, especially so when you travel "THE ONLY WAY." The "FIFIELD" is equipped with twin screws, assuring you of over one hundred per cent better chance of reaching port than you would have with a single screw steamer. The "FIFIELD" is the only steamer carrying passengers between Coos county and San Francisco equipped with twin-screws. Make your reservations now for the next sailing, Nov. 12th, 8 a.m.

G. T. Treadgold was in Myrtle Point last week, where he with several other prominent republicans of the county made political speeches, urging the election of the entire republican ticket. R. G. Smith, democratic candidate for congress in this district, spoke in Bandon Sunday night, but as this is election day and we are not allowed to electioneer within 100 feet of the polls, or anywhere else, we refrain from saying anything about his speech. The same fact will hold concerning the other political speeches that have been held in Bandon recently. We don't want to go up against the corrupt practices act, or anything else in the way of election laws.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Bender and Mrs. Bender's sister, Miss Margaret Clinton, left Monday for Portland, being taken to Roseburg by private conveyance. They expect to make their home in the Oregon metropolis. They have many friends in Myrtle Point who will wish them continued success in their new home while regretting their departure. Mr. Bender was in the jewelry business here for a number of years and carried it forward with much success up to the time of its sale to Mr. Schroeder. He and Mrs. Bender are also successful optometrists, having had a large patronage since receiving their state license, says the Myrtle Point Enterprise. Mr. and Mrs. Bender are quite well known in Bandon having been here a number of times on outings and practicing their profession as optometrists.

Election Moving Quietly.

The election is moving off very quietly to day in Bandon, but people are voting very rapidly. At 2:00 o'clock this afternoon, there were 146 votes cast in the west precinct, and at 2:15 there were 145 in the east precinct, and voters were lined up in great numbers at both polling places waiting for a chance to vote.

Miss Dixie Lottin returned to this city on the noon boat after a week's visit at the bay.

Miss Nettie Gibson of Langlois who has been visiting at North Bend for the past few weeks, arrived in this city to day on her way home.

Prof. S. D. Hocket, principal of the Coquille High School was in this city Sunday the guest of Prof. H. C. Ostien. Prof. Hocket expressed a desire to see our up-to-date school house, and was shown over the building by Mr. Ostien. Mr. Hocket expressed himself as being greatly pleased with the building in all its parts.

Playground or Jail? A playground leaflet that has recently been issued prints on its front page, with illustration, this interesting alternative: "Shall we provide a playground or enlarge the jail?" There is a picture of "de gang"—still in the making as to go or evil.

HOW MANY COURTSHIPS? Every man ought to have two courtships in his existence, the first, of course, when he is winning his wife. Then should come the years of struggle in making money to support her and their children. Then he ought to go back to courting his wife again and showing his children how good a father can be.

That is the advice of James A. Patten, the big Chicago grain speculator, given in an interview as one of the reasons why he quit the board of trade.

We beg to amend. Instead of having two courtships, a man should have but one and that one continuous.

Why should a man bury his affection in the grave of big business and resurrect it only after he has been successful in his chase after dollars?

Suppose that in the interim while he is immersed in business the wife whom he has neglected should die?

Wives do that sometimes. Dejected, lonely, yearning for affection, many a heartless wife has gone to an early grave, and there is no more courting of her save at the coffin side, where the ears are dumb to the message of love and the lips can no longer smile response.

Suppose the wife, neglected and practically forsaken, left without husbandly attention, should turn in her despair for consolation to another. That may mean disgrace or a divorce court scandal, and there are no more courtships coming.

For further particulars read the newspapers. Or suppose the children should die. Mr. Patten, awaiting the time when you can show them "how good a father you can be."

No. The man is wrong, even though he is frank in saying what so many business men are doing nowadays to their lifetime sorrow and regret.

Better advice would be: Never cease courting the girl you have married, even if you must let go some of the petty dollars.

Which shall it be: More money and less love—Or more love and less money?

Why, sir, all the gold of the Yukon and all the diamonds of the Transvaal can never repay you for the lost opportunity to love and be loved.

HE KILLED HER.

A young woman of Peoria, Ill., committed suicide in her room at a hotel by shooting herself.

She had been taken to the hotel by her lover, to whom she had surrendered her honor and all that a woman holds dear, on a promise of marriage.

He took her to the room to tell her that he was to be married to another young woman and that their intimacy must cease. Then he left her.

The shock killed her. The pistol with which she took her

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

THE PACE THAT KILLS.

A woman who has delighted thousands of audiences—an actress—is dying in an eastern city because of—

The pace that kills.

The woman wants to die. There is nothing to live for. Possibly she would commit suicide, only she is intelligent enough to know that to hasten her going would not straighten out the tangle of her life—only complicate it.

The pace that kills.

There is no denying it has its allurements. Tread the primrose path of dalliance. Chase the winged butterfly. Listen to the patter of the fountains. Watch the dryads dance. Eat, drink and be merry. Ho, for the short life and the happy!

The pace that kills.

There's pleasure in the pace. Oh, yes! Lift high the cup of life and drain it to the dregs. On with the joy rides! What is life but a thing to conjure with? Give us that which brightens the eye and brings the flush to the cheek and livens the feet and stirs the blood of passion.

Go the pace!

Aye, but there's the rub. It kills! By and by the eyes that shone with pleasure will be bleary; by and by the glow of cheek will turn to pallor; the hand that, without a tremor save of joy, raised the cup will tremble in its palsy, and the feet that gayly tripped the measure of the dance will shuffle on the floor.

It kills!

Some day the rivers of fancy will lose their runnels in the desert sands of life; some day the mirage that lures will rise and fade away. Disillusionment will come. And some day ambition and hope and heart and peace will go. Some day the money will go and there will be the added pinch of poverty.

The pace does not kill its victim in a day. Would it might!

Slowly, insidiously, gross habits will build a prison house around the soul and life will be narrowed down. The senses will fail to please. In satiety and bondage goes the last quarter of the home stretch.

The pace that kills.

It is inexorable. If you dance you must pay the fiddler. And the pay is wrung most cruelly—by piecemeal!

It is written in the good old book: "The soul that sinneth it shall die."

The word is true not because it is in the book, but it is in the book because it is true! It states the unvarying law of things—as unvarying as the law of mathematics. If you go the pace you die.

The pace kills.

THE ROSE ROUTE.

Attractive Improvement of a Railroad to Eliminate Its Dust Nuisance.

The "rose route to New York." The flowery phrase suggests a musical comedy or a press agent's weird imagination. It is nothing of the sort, however, for the words describe tersely the probable ultimate result of the improvement recently begun by the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad. When the work is completed it will be possible for grimy engineers to leap from the cabs at almost any way station and gather an armful of roses to festoon about their levers, and fresh bouquets may be procured for the dining car tables anywhere along the line. To be explicit, the railroad between Providence and New London is being beautified on an elaborate scale. Primarily the aim is not aesthetic. The elimination of the dust nuisance is the inspiring motive. For several years the railroad officials have been considering plans for bettering conditions and have vainly sought some sort of vegetation to cover exposed sandy banks. The problem has been studied not only because of a desire to get rid of the annoyance to passengers, but also because the shifting sand has been directly responsible for a considerable expenditure in maintaining tracks and rolling stock.

Getting rid of the dirt kicked up from the surface of the track is a comparatively easy matter, as rock ballast has passed the experimental stage, but banishing the dust sucked in from the sandy embankments by the trains was a much more difficult problem. Appeal was made to landscape artists for a species of vegetation that would cover the soil and not be liable to take fire easily from sparks of passing locomotives. The experts recommended Dorothy Perkins Rambler rosebushes, and late last fall a practical experiment was tried with 1,300 bushes in the deep cut north of Apohaug. The bushes are planted in three rows in the deepest parts of the cuts. It is claimed that under favorable conditions they will send out shoots twelve or fifteen feet long in a season. It is planned to have them run up the sandy embankments, and intertwining form a solid tangled mat which, it is believed, will effectively keep down the dust and fine sand.—Providence Journal.

PAY FOR HONEST SERVICE.

Retail Merchant's Right to Protection From Unfair Competition.

Speaking recently before a state convention of retail merchants, a representative of a firm manufacturing a widely advertised food product said:

"If co-operation is to be a loyal and sincere sort we must recognize the right of every one in the chain of distribution to an honest profit. Not even the consumer has any right to object to the honest profits of the merchant who gives him honest service. No one who will carefully study the relation of profits to service can escape the conviction that public economy is best served by the policy of 'live and let live.'"

"The argument of the mail order house, chain store and department store that elimination of the middleman would be economical to the consumer is absolutely false. Such institutions, taken broadly, are enemies rather than friends of the consumer, just as they are of the retailer. If they hold as rigidly to strict truth and fairness as the retail grocer does they would die an early death."

"Nothing has contributed to the existence of these irregular mongrel classes so much as favoritism, but even this is slowly getting a hold on thinking retailers. Quantity prices have made possible every one of the unfair practices of the trade. If you can buy ten cases more cheaply than one it is fair to sell 100 cases more cheaply than ten and a carload at a lower price still. But such practices inevitably make it possible for the big buyer to own goods more cheaply than his small competitor. If mail order houses paid the same price for their goods that the small merchant does they wouldn't last a year, because the small merchant is the consumer's friend and with a square deal will beat any catalogue house out of existence in his town in the game of competition."
