FOR CHEAPER DIVORCE.

Granted that the law recognizes certain causes as permitting absolute divorce, then the process of obtaining such a divorce should be made as simple as possible. It should, in effect, be automatic. The intervention of lawyers, the prolonged suits, the noxious publicity, should all be avoided. The only thing necessary should be that the innocent party produce proof of the other's guilt before a civil officer, presumably a judge; then, without the expenditure of a cent, the divorce should be declared.—Rev. John S. Allen.

Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Strang called at our office Tuesday and showed us a lot of strawberries which had been presented to them by Mr. Korrigan of this city. There were four boxes of the berries, and they were piled as high as the tour would permit of sitting in a group, which made almost as many berries on top of the boxes as there were in them, and everyone we have heard express themselves who had seen them, said they were the largest and finest lot of berries they ever saw. We measured some that were 8 x inches in circumference, and the whole lot were very even in size, that being but little more than the average. Seven set side by side measured up a full foot in length, and all were shapely and beautifully colored.—Coquille Herald.
