ATHLETIC GIRLS.

The mental and physical superiority of the American woman, which seems to be conceded very generally, is due in a great measure to her training in athletics. Athletic training is just as important to girls as to boys. But experience has proved that the same sort of games are not beneficial to the two sexes. Outdoor training in the country is, of course, best of all. But thousands of poor children in the cities never get to the country, so we have to bring outdoors to them. Folk dancing is ideal exercise for girls. It gives them the right carriage, develops their chests and prevents tuberculosis. It has been proved that improved physical health means increased mental efficiency. The girl who wants to be a brilliant woman should first become a healthy woman.—Mrs. James Speyer.

PLEA FOR WEALTH.

Another misconception is that the great fortunes of the country are the result of high finance. With very rare exceptions rich men and rich corporations have become so by the same means as the farmers of the west have become rich. They have grown rich through the development of the resources of the country. The men who are rich now are the optimists who borrowed money and had the courage and foresight to hold these resources until their value had been developed. Carnegie was the greatest of industrial optimists. When others were timid and hesitating he borrowed all he could to build mills and railroads. When the country entered on the floodtide of prosperity Carnegie was the master of the iron and steel industry.—Paul D. Cravath.

TREES PROVE OF GREAT BENEFIT TO PUBLIC ROADS

Make Them Look Ornamental and Protect Travelers From Sun.

It has been pointed out that fruit trees are grown along the highways of European countries and are not only an ornament and comfort, but a source of revenue at the same time. Cherry trees, the fruit trees most used in Germany, grow quite large, about thirty feet high, with a crown spread of equal dimension, and remain sound many years after having reached full growth. Apple and pear trees, like the cherry, grow to great height and spread and would therefore be suitable for avenue planting. But it is desirable to use trees with persistent fruit which the wind does not shake off; hence the preference for the cherry tree.

Nut trees, like walnut, pecan or hickory, might possibly yield a small profit a few years after planting. Of the forest trees those would be preferable that attain large size, that are long lived, that withstand high winds and grow symmetrical without being trimmed into shape every year or two. These would include the oak, hackberry, linden, sycamore, varieties of hard maple and others. To insure success in planting trees care must be taken in their selection with reference to the soil in which they are to be planted. Some varieties, like the oak, locust and cottonwood, will grow in any soil, while the elm and sycamore must have a deep loam free from alkali to develop into perfect specimens and attain a long life. As we have a great variety of native trees it will not be difficult to find a suitable species for almost any soil.

ATTRACT FARMER'S TRADE.

Way to Do It Is to Have a Good Road From His Farm to Town.

When it's rainy, stormy weather business is slack. The farmers cannot come to town because of muddy roads, and it is always several days after a rain before the roads are passable. But during this rainy weather neither can the farmer work in the field. If there was a good road from the farmer's place to town it is certain that the farmer would come to town on days when it was impossible to plow or cultivate.

That's just one of a hundred reasons why you should work for good roads. Just as water follows the natural course, so will the farmer travel ten miles of good roads to your town rather than go half that distance over bad roads to a closer town.

Roads cost about $4,000 a mile. The road district extends three miles, making a benefit district of 900 acres on each side, or a total of 1,800 acres to the mile. In some states the township pays one-fourth, leaving $3,000 to be paid for by the farmers.

This means an assessment of only $1.56 per acre. Divided into ten year payments this figures 16 cents per acre per year for ten years. During the ten years the farmers in the road district are exempt from all road taxes. That amounts to a reduction of 7 cents on every $100 of valuation.

In other words, a road can be built for not to exceed 12 cents per acre for ten years. As the average farm contains 160 acres, it means $19.20 per year for ten years for each farmer. It is evident to any one that land on a road is worth $25 to $30 per acre more.

The drag is successful when persistently used. Commercial clubs in a great many towns give the farmers free drugs and offer substantial cash prizes for the best half mile stretch of dragged road.

Good roads are a necessity to your business and an economical necessity to the farmer. You can afford to give valuable time and effort to promoting good roads.

NOVEL GOOD ROADS SCHEME.

Tennessee Has Sent Out Call For 50,000 Volunteers to Work on Highways. Tennessee has the fever for better roads. The project at present of greatest interest is the movement for a highway across the state from Memphis to Bristol, a distance of over 500 miles.

The commission has set out to secure not less than 50,000 volunteers to work on the road for two days. To this end blanks have been sent out to subcommissioners and committees in counties through which the highway will pass. It is stated that replies have been received from about one-fifth of those to whom blanks were sent and that the commission now has enrolled about 18,000 volunteers. Many of these not only volunteer to work two days, but a considerable proportion express their willingness to labor two weeks, ninety days or until the enterprise is completed.
