Raymond Teal Musical Comedy Company.

The Raymond Teal Musical Comedy Company, the best that ever visited Coos County will appear at the Orpheum Theatre for a three night's engagement commencing Saturday, December 16—with a change of program each night.

The scenery that the company carries is the most beautiful that ever was shown in the county, and as the Orpheum stage is the only one outside of the Masonic in Marshfield that can handle it. The different scenery will be shown each night.

The Company comes highly recommended and those that have seen it say they are second to none. The company carries 30 people in all, mostly girls, beautiful costumes, good singing and dancing, no waits. Don't miss it.

The show will start at 8 P. M. Tickets 75c, children 50c. All seats reserved. Seats on sale at J. T. Mars cigar store.

Criminal Calendar Work in Circuit Court.

Court opened Monday morning with Judge John S. Coke on the bench. The criminal cases upon the docket were the first to receive attention, among them being the following unfortunates:

State of Oregon vs. Abraham Gustafson—larceny. Defendant pleaded guilty, and his attorney asked leniency of the court inasmuch as Mr. Gustafson was intoxicated and had no recollection of taking the sum of $50.10 belonging to another, and for the further reason that the defendant had at one time been an inmate of the State Insane Asylum. After mature deliberation by the court it was adjudged that the maximum period of time in the penitentiary (indeterminate) be meted out but that he be paroled during good behavior and refrain from the use of intoxicating liquor. He was also required to make a monthly report to the clerk of court.

State of Oregon vs. Hans Hanson. Fishing without license. Case to be heard and determined by court, without jury, upon stipulated facts at equity term.

The State of Oregon vs. Bandon calf case Larceny, defendant found guilty of petty larceny, the value of the animal stolen having been determined at thirty dollars. Sentence to be pronounced later.

At the time of going to press the state is endeavoring to settle a dispute with Fred Goss in regard to selling liquor to minors. The defendant says he is not guilty.

The following named comprise the grand jury who will serve until next term of court: Thomas Hanly, A. J. Radabaugh, Chas. S. Warner, V. N. Barker, W. H. Hervey, Geo. Witte, Geo. W. Bascom.

The case of Edward Garrison, who is again to be tried for one of the most brutal crimes that ever came to public attention in this locality, is now before the court, and no doubt the entire day will be consumed to empanel a jury. A few months ago Garrison was convicted of murder in the first degree, and was sentenced to be hanged—Coquille Herald.

More May be Alive in Mine.

Briceville Tenn., Dec. 13.—Raps heard in a shaft adjoining the Cross Mountain mine in which more than 100 men were entombed Saturday, led the rescue squads to redouble their efforts, owing to the belief that some men are still alive in the back workings.

A Tramp's Story.

Here's a little story a tramp told me Saturday, while we sat on a Seventh street stairway. It presents some things for us to scratch our heads over.

Eleven years ago he came to Spokane from the east, got a steady job at fair pay and went in to get a start in the great Northwest.

By hard work and saving he had laid by eight hundred dollars and was just about to make the first payment on an orchard tract when he was taken with typhoid fever. After weeks in a hospital he was discharged, but for five months he was unable to do a day's work, and when he finally regained his health his job and his bank account were gone.

"I went to Seattle," said the hobo, "and got a steady job in a wholesale hardware house. It was hard, heavy work at fair pay, but I again started a bank account, each year adding to it, and I had a little truck patch four miles out of the city ready to tie up.

"And then pneumonia came and I again went to the hospital and remained eleven weeks. When I came out I went to work, but was not strong enough. Nervous prostration followed and I went back to the hospital until my bank account was exhausted. Then I went out to look for work I could do.

"That was two years ago. Since then I have only had odd jobs—or ones that would last from five days to six weeks, with long waits between.

"My health entirely recovered and today I am an able-bodied man. I can do the hardest of work, but I can't find it to do. I never drink and never smoked a cigarette in my life.

"Now my personal appearance is against me. I am a tramp and I look it. I hunt for wood piles to carry in. I am down to the 'two-bit' jobs. Men distrust me because I look it. I can't shave. I can't change my clothes. What's a fellow going to do?"

This was the hobo's story in short. It may be true, it may not, but who is to judge?

With a stomach full of bread and meat and a quarter in his pocket, he started up the Southern Pacific tracks—a homeless dog hunting a shelter and a bone.

Now if this man's story was true (or if it wasn't, for that matter), what is his end?

Each day he will drop down and down, looking more and more the bum, until he will be arrested on sight as a vagrant or suspicious character.

So he will break for one of the big cities, mix it with the wharf resorts and thugs, and the morning papers will relate his last night's work.

When a man gets down where necessity pinches and where fellow men look on him with aversion, that man is a dangerous proposition.

When hunger gnaws at his stomach and he can't sell his work to relieve it, then he becomes desperate and prison looks better than freedom.

Then he will take a chance. He will knock you down with a billy, hold you up with a gun, or throw you under the cars.

And then I think of what Andrew of the libraries did the other day—and what he might have done.

He gave $25,000,000 to "promote the advancement and diffusion of knowledge and understanding among the people of the United States."

It is this want of money at one end and this waste at the other end that is breeding thugs, murderers and bomb throwers.

When a Carnegie can give away two hundred million dollars and not miss it and a working man can't get two dollars to save himself from arrest as a vag—well, a man who thinks knows there is bound to be something doing in this country soon.—Oregon City Courier.
