According to information received from Washington, D. C., the familiar face of Ben Franklin, that has so long adorned our one cent stamps, is now to be replaced by that of George Washington. This will be quite a come-down for George, who has so long held jobs on stamps of higher denominations, but we trust his sticking qualities will not be impaired by the denomination, as he will always be "first in the hearts of his countrymen."

The Carnival committee will have their banquet Thursday evening of this week at Old Fellows Hall.

Sill is Bound Over.

M. L. Sill, who was taken down to Curry county last week from Portland, to answer charges in a statutory case, was bound over to the grand jury with his bonds fixed, we are told, at fifteen hundred dollars. Up to the time of going to press we have not learned whether he has secured bonds or not.

Says W. H. Rautman: "A farmer who goes out into the wilderness and puts $1,000 improvements on his land must thereby add several thousand dollars to the value of the surrounding wild land—yet we fine the farmer while we give unearned thousands to the speculators."

In Clackamas County one company has over eight millions worth of water power in use upon which property no taxes are paid. If taxed it would help some to pay the taxes the farmers have to pay on every horsepower and strap of harness they own.

The Great Northern has done a splendid work this season, as it did last, in operating exhibit cars through the Middle West, taking a collection of Oregon products to the farmers so they might see what is grown here and learn of the state's agricultural opportunities at first hand.

The Forest Service is mapping the forests of the state, and will show the ownership of each piece of standing timber of any account in Oregon. Ira Zeh has commenced the construction of a fine modern residence on his lots recently purchased on the Plank road. This will make a fine addition to that part of town.

Fourmile.

Although it was a very stormy day last Saturday a goodly number of Fourmilers drove to Bandon to attend the Grange.

Wanted—A job of most any kind will take a calling down without giving any back talk—am used to it—been married ten years.

Geo. Tryon was up from the coast visiting friends at Fourmile this week.

It is rumored there is to be a wedding not many miles from here in the near future and we predict them a happy married life.

Mr. Stillwell is a busy man these days clearing land with a donkey engine.

H. A. DeLong went to Coquille last Wednesday to attend the funeral of Mr. Wilcox.

The Fourmilers are surely law-abiding citizens. A deer walked up the main road the other day for two miles and no one attempted to shoot it. Mr. Miller's little boy was leading it on a rope.

The Socialist Local held their election last Sunday but we did not learn who were the newly elected officers.

Although seventy five years of age, Mr. T. Shaw does his own milking, makes his own butter and does his other farm work, is champion foot-racer of men over sixty, in this vicinity, also is a regular Jack Johnson with the boxing—Its the climate.

There is talk of organizing a Woodrow Wilson Club in Fourmile. Wonder if Jim Cope would join it, we don't believe he will vote for Talt again this coming election.

Looking Backward.

The principle part of my last year's work is satisfactorily finished and my mind, which was entirely set to accomplish the task started, becomes easier, and my time less occupied, needs something to keep me busy, naturally the many requests to write some more for your paper is a pleasant exercise to me. It depends on you now, whether I find grace in your eyes to accept my story of early backwood life.

The father and mother of the present older Yoakams were among the early settlers on Coos River. Both father and mother were healthy and strong, and a number of youngsters waddling about kept them busy building a house and to clear some land upon which to raise produce to feed the precious hungry little mouths.

Among many of the then plenty monarchs of trees of which the present Coos county people find but few, was one of more than ordinary size. It stood not far from the log house, its tremendous branches forming a shelter for stock, and underneath, the little ones had their play ground, while even the older two found it a pleasure to rest now and then in the cool shade. The foundation, that is the roots of this mammoth tree, was so immense that the tree was spared and left as an ornament for later generations to look at, and wonder at its size and age. However, as often in life, the unexpected happens. One very stormy winter night, the family had noticed they heard the groaning and crashing of many trees, but could do nothing in the dark but lay still. Another blast of wind struck this giant tree and uprooted it, and in its fall it struck the house and crushed it. A baby lying close to the mother was pierced by a limb and killed at once and four or five of the other children were killed, the father and mother escaped unharmed. This affected the poor mother so much that they moved to Empire City.

Later on when strength returned, and further increase of the family came, John Yoakam and family moved to the South Fork of the Coquille, buying Alexander John's place. It was an ideal home, their house in the myrtle bottom, surrounded by fertile gardens and rich prairies upon which elk, deer, horses and cattle grazed, the Yoakam family prospered.

One day Mr. Yoakam was away from home, mother was busy with work, the children playing under neath a tall oak tree whose limbs and branches again formed an agreeable shelter, when out of the near woods crept a tall hungry panther straight for the children. The few fowls in the yard began to cackle and break for shelter. Thus the faithful dog was aroused from his slumbers and in a moment began to scent the enemy and with a few jumps he made for the varmint, much taller than he was. His barking brought Mrs. Yoakam to the scene. The panther beginning to feel uneasy jumped up into the branches of the tree, the thick foliage hiding him. All that kept him from dropping on a child was the dog, who reared up against the trunk of the oak, kept up his savage bark. In the meantime Mrs. Yoakam had taken the rifle and run to assist. About twelve feet from the ground, crouched upon a limb, lay the panther ready to jump, one of its eyes watching the dog, the other spying the way to get out of the situation. The moment Mrs. Yoakam saw the beast, the rifle was raised, sight taken and a shot rang through the neighborhood; it was a true aim, a second later the panther fell from limb to limb and struck the ground a dead animal. The dog collared him and enjoyed the possibility to bite without being attacked. Mrs. Yoakam picked up the scared little ones and proudly walked home becoming the hero of the settlement. Pohl.

Success.

Success is like a pretty girl. Not quickly to be wooed. You must, if you are not a churl. Respect her every mood. Because she tells you "No" today Don't mope too long in sorrow. If you persist she may say "Yes" to you tomorrow. —Detroit Free Press.

A Journalistic Feat. Vox Populi—Do you think you've boosted your circulation by giving a year's subscription for the biggest potato raised in the county? The Editor—Mebbe not, but I got four barrels of samples. —Chicago News.

Defending Him Against Himself. A rockless boat has been designed. It cannot tip, as fools will find. A shootless gun should now be tried On fools who bog the hapless guide. Then there might be a neat device For fools who skate on crumbling ice. But first let's greet the mind serene Which planned the fool proof gasoline. —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Obeying Injunction. "She insisted on having a woman lawyer secure her divorce." "Why was she so particular?" "She did not want to go contrary to that portion of the marriage ceremony that reads 'Let no man put asunder.'" —Judge.

The Comet Hoodoo. A comet is a curious thing. It floats across the night. And gloomy superstitions cling Around it in its flight. How happily the world might grope, All free from useless care, If no one had a telescope To prove the thing was there! —Washington Star.

Making a Monkey of Him. "He says he is going to look up his family tree." "He had better make sure first that there are none of his ancestors swinging up there ready to throw nuts at him." —Boston Post.

They're Here. The tumult and the shouting starts; The gallant football coach is here; The rampant quarterback imparts A wallop to the foe's ear. The rah-rah boys are with us yet, Least we forget, lest we forget. —Milwaukee Sentinel.

The Exception. Bilton (angrily)—You ask for nothing but dress, dress, dress! Mrs. Bilton (indignantly)—Henry Bilton, I do not! I asked you only last week for a new hand bag. —Judge.

An Undignified Comparison. The tariff often bids us frown, For in a very little while, Like fashion's latest hat or gown, 'Tis certain to be out of style. —Washington Star.
