Suffragists of Nonmilitant Type Will Get Ballot First

By Governor WILLIAM SPRY of Utah

NOW, we have entirely disassociated the idea of suffrage out west with ideas of violent actions or UNWOMANLY CONDUCT! Women go to the polls there as quietly and with as much propriety as they would go shopping.

They want to help their sisters everywhere to win the ballot, but they find it strange to think of helping out those who clamor for it with a LOUD NOISE and an UNSEEMLY MANNER. They believe quite generally in my state, I think, as I believe myself, that the suffragists, the nonmilitant group, are campaigning in a MORE EFFECTIVE MANNER than the others and that when the victory comes it will be to their banners.

The Scrap Book

A Great Relief to Her.

From a story found in "The Land of Romance," a recent book about the ever interesting Scottish border, it may be assumed that the Covenanters believed that the rightful name of the highlanders was the nether regions. It is not so many years, says the author, Mrs. J. Lang, since an old woman up Yarrow way was listening to a lesson from the book of Revelation read to her by her grandchild.

"And there appeared another wonder in heaven," read the little girl, "and behold a great red dragon!"

"Hoots, lassie," interrupted the dame, "It's no a dragon!"

The child persisted.

"Gie's the book an' rax the by're spees. D-r-a, dra, g-o-n, goon. Ye're richt an' Ah'm wrang. Read on!"

The child resumed, "And the great dragon was cast out!"

"I kent that wad be the upshot o't!" the old dame cried triumphantly. "It's the winner the me hoo he ever wan in!"

His Fruits Shall Follow.

The books say well, my brothers. Each man's life.

The outcome of his former living is. The bygone wrongs bring forth sorrows and woes.

The bygone right brings bliss.

If he who liveth, learning whence woe springs.

Endureth patiently, striving to pay His utmost debt for ancient evils done.

In love and truth away—

If he shall day by day dwell merciful,

Holy and just and kind and true, and

Desire from where it clings with bleeding roots

Till love of life have end—

He, dying, leaveth as the sum of him

A life count closed whose ills are dead

and quit,

Whose good is quick and mighty, far and near,

So that fruits follow it.

—"Light of Asia."

Owned Everything.

An Irishman crossed to Canada on a Canadian Pacific steamer, took the Canadian Pacific train for Vancouver, ate at C. P. R. eating houses, stopped at C. P. R. hotels, was shown C. P. R. land and finally got to Vancouver, much impressed with the greatness of that institution.

He went to a hotel, registered and asked the clerk how soon breakfast would be ready.

"Breakfast is over," said the clerk.

The Irishman looked at his watch.

"It isn't time for it to be over," he answered.

"Oh, yes, it is," said the clerk. "You see, your watch isn't right. We run our dining room on Canadian Pacific time."

"Good Lord!" said the Irishman in an awed voice. "Does the Canadian Pacific own the time too?"—Saturday Evening Post.

Barry the Persuasive.

It was said of Barry, the player, that he had a voice which might lure a bird from a tree and at the same time add address and manner the most prepossessing and compelling. The Dublin theater, of which he was proprietor, failed, and he was considerably indebted to his actors, musicians, etc. Among others, the master carpenter called at Barry's house and was clamorous in demanding his money. Barry, who was ill at the time, came to the head of the stairs and asked what was the matter.

"Matter enough," replied the carpenter.

ter. "I want my money and can't get it!"

"Don't be in a passion," said Barry. "Do me the favor to walk upstairs, if you please, and we will speak upon the business."

"Not I, Mr. Barry," said the carpenter. "You owe me £100 already, and if I come up you will owe me £200 before I leave you."

A Problem Solved.

He was from the country all right, but he had "gumption" enough to know that it costs "high all outdoors" to satisfy a healthy rustic appetite at certain city restaurants. Therefore he was slow to take advantage of the wine list which his friend and host thrust before him in the midst of the white lights. Two, three and four dollars a bottle was a heap of money, by heck.

But his face lighted finally as if he had solved the economic problem.

"Guess I'll have some o' that," said he, indicating with his finger. The line on the card read:

Corkage

—New York Globe.

Squelched.

Senator Ogle, a member of the Pennsylvania assembly, had been deputed to compose an address to the newly elected president, Andrew Jackson. When the bluff old warrior submitted his document to the house a fellow member, a dapper little chap from Philadelphia, observed:

"Pardon me, general; I hesitate about making any suggestion to so distinguished an individual, but I cannot refrain from saying that it is customary to write the first personal pronoun with a capital 'I' instead of a small 'i'."

General Ogle returned a look of scorn. "Sir," said he, "when I write to so great a man as General Andrew Jackson, Democratic president of the United States, I shame myself, sir. I use as small an 'i' as I can put upon paper. But, sir, if ever I should have to write to a little snipe like you I would use an 'I,' sir, that would fill two pages of foolscap."

FOREST FIRES.

They Are Sometimes a Gain to Those Who Own the Timber.

People who have read accounts of great forest fires may be surprised to learn that, in place of loss, such fires are sometimes a gain to the owner. The loss in lumber if cut within a few years is small, and the removal of underbrush reduces the cost of lumbering.

That a forest fire could in any way be a benefit and not an injury seems so novel that some proof is necessary. The statement has been made that more timber is destroyed by fire every year than is converted into lumber. As a matter of fact, the report of the forest service declares the actual loss in national reserves for the last three years has amounted to only one-tenth of 1 per cent. From some fifty lumber companies the highest admitted loss from fire is 2 per cent in twenty years. Another company estimates its fire loss for fifty years at 1 per cent, and another, during sixty, has had an annual loss of one-sixteenth of 1 per cent. Twenty-eight companies report their loss since organization as "hardly worth mentioning."

The point of these reports, so surprising to those unacquainted with the lumber business is that the fires, while they kill the trees, do not consume the trunk. The less severe fires do not necessarily kill the trees. Worse fires do this by burning the underbrush around the trees and perhaps the tops of the trees. But the trunk of the tree, the log from which the boards are to be cut, is seldom touched. The forest fires move as good lumber as the other, the only difference being that it is necessary to cut it within a limited time.

White pine or hemlock in the upper Mississippi valley must be cut the first or the second winter following the fire or worms will injure the lumber. The two year period applies in the "inland empire" and to the hemlock on the slopes of the Cascades. Western spruce need not be cut for three years and western fir for four years. Red cedar has no limit, and trees burned fifty years ago are now being turned into shingles.—Jonas Howard in Chicago Tribune.

EQUAL TO THE TEST.

Daniel Webster, the Boy, at His Entrance to Exeter Academy.

Almost a year passed, however, before the plan so long cherished was fairly started and Daniel, dressed in a brand new homespun suit and astride a sidesaddle, rode with his father to Exeter to be entered at the famous academy founded by John Phillips. The principal then and forty years thereafter was Dr. Benjamin Abbot, one of the greatest teachers our country has yet produced. As the doctor was ill the duty of examining the new pupil fell to Joseph S. Buckminster, then an usher at the academy, but destined to influence strongly the religious life of New England.

It was the custom of the doctor, we are told, to conduct the examination of applicants with pompous ceremony, and that, imitating him, young Buckminster summoned Webster to his presence, put on his hat and said, "Well, sir, what is your age?" "Fourteen," was the reply. "Take this Bible, my lad, and read that chapter."

The passage given him was St. Luke's dramatic description of the conspiring of Judas with the priests and scribes, of the last supper, of the betrayal by Judas, of the three denials of Peter and the scene in the house of the high priest. But young Webster was equal to the test and read the whole passage to the end in a voice and with a fervor such as Master Buckminster had never listened to before. "Young man," said he, "you are qualified to enter this institution," and no more questions were put to him.—John Bach McMaster. "Daniel Webster."

A Word to Study.

Snellpaardeblooszoondeerspoorwegpit-roolrijtuig—that's the technical and locally accepted name of the automobile in Flanders. "Snell" (note that the second letter is n, not m) means "rapid," "paardebloos" means "horseless," "zoondeerspoorweg" is the recognized way of describing a thing "without rails," and, finally, "pitroolrijtuig" implies a thing "driven by petroleum." So you have it, quite simply, and mere white whizzers and drab devils are outclassed. But how'd you like to be hit by a real "snellpaardebloos"—etc.?—St. Louis Republic.

Evolutions of Custom.

"My son," said Mrs. McGudley, "before I married your father I made him promise that he would not smoke or play cards for money."

"Yes?"

"Times have changed. If you decide to propose to a woman I want you to exact a similar assurance."—Washington Star.

Made the Sale.

"Mr. Whilker, I have seen it stated that women's feet are becoming larger. How about that?"

"There may be some truth in it, but among all my customers I don't know a single one that it applies to, madam."—Chicago Tribune.

Knows No Pity.

"Is he very bitter against the man who ran away with his wife?"

"Almost too bitter. He insists upon getting a divorce so that she can marry him."—Houston Post.

Good.

"He has a good wife, hasn't he?"

"I should say so. He can always borrow money from her when he goes broke himself."—Detroit Free Press.

The Salic Law.

The Salic law, by which females were excluded from inheriting the crown of France, was instituted by Pharamond in 421.

Alum Cement.

Common alum melted in an iron spoon is said to be a strong cement for joining glass, china or metal. It is well recommended for fastening door knobs in place.

Hector Boyce.

Hector Boyce, distinguished Scottish historian and friend of Erasmus, was invited to preside over the newly founded University of Aberdeen at the beginning of the sixteenth century. He accepted the office after some natural hesitation. His yearly salary was 40 marks ($11).

"Daughter, has the duke told you the old, old story as yet?"

"Yes, mother. He says he owes about 200,000 plunks."—Washington Herald.

"The rates were higher, but it was worth it."

"How now?"

"The doctor said my wife must have a rest, so to save her the trouble of dressing we changed hotels three times a day."—Louisville Courier-Journal.
