The Chrysanthemum. Once more it comes in glad array! Each blossom is a vision gay Which unto fancy must recall A splendid scrambled paragon. It flaunts above the autumn scene With perfume that's a cross between A drug store and a motorcar. When oil and gas commingled are, And yet we love the sturdy grace They seem to bring into each place. They make a jovial, happy crowd, Where botany laughs out aloud. —Washington Star.

Too Much Grief. "Then the wedding wasn't altogether a success?" "No; the groom's mother cried louder than the bride's mother. It was considered very bad taste."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Wrote of Scenery He Never Saw.

The most notable instance of a novel dealing with a country which the author had never seen was Shorthouse's "John Inglesant."

The second volume of that remarkable romance deals in the most detailed way with Italian manners and Italian scenery. Many of the descriptions—that of Umbria at night, for instance, and the scene in the pavilion in the forest—are charged with the very atmosphere of Italy; and Florence during the plague lives horribly before our eyes. Yet Joseph Henry Shorthouse had never been in Italy. Enthusiasm and the genius for assimilation evolved it all in a quiet house at Edgbaston.—London Chronicle.

Crude Mining Methods.

Mica mining in the Nellore district, India, though a highly profitable industry, is carried on practically as it was by the natives a hundred years ago. The mica vein is followed up by underhand stoping which results in the production of tortuous, wormlike holes sometimes extending to a depth of 300 feet below the surface. The mica excavated is brought to the surface by a string of coolies working hand over hand on rudely constructed bamboo ladders. On account of the accumulation of water during the night when work ceases all sinking operations are delayed each morning for an hour or more while the water is being dipped out with buckets by coolies.
