A HUSBAND'S DUTY

PROVISION FOR THE FUTURE.

A Few Very Sensible and Very Practical Suggestions to the Man Who Doesn't Stop to Think About What May Happen When He is Gone.

There are any number of men who are the most indulgent of husbands and fathers, providing a good living for their families and who yet live up to the limit of their incomes, with never a thought for the future and never an effort to protect their loved ones and their homes in case of their death.

To such men, as well as to those who are provident, but who keep putting off the arrangement of their business affairs to meet such an emergency, the following sensible suggestions by Willis Frederick Dix in the New York Independent may be of interest:

Is your house really in order? Outwardly, perhaps, yes, since your wife is a good housekeeper, but how about your own personal affairs? Your lawyer has perhaps drawn your will for you, and your personal accounts are businesslike, but have you looked that will over recently, and in the case of your death is there some one in your household who is sufficiently familiar with your account book to understand your system?

Have you tried to imagine just what condition would exist in your family immediately after your death, and have you carefully provided for that condition? These and a number of similar questions must be answered satisfactorily before you can say that your house is really in order.

The following are a few practical suggestions which, if you think them over and act upon them, may be the means of saving you or your family from some seriously inconvenient plight or actual trouble and loss.

First of all, make a point of keeping your wife or some member of your household familiar with your system of personal accounts. Let her know where your safety deposit box is, where you keep the key, where your letter file relating to these business matters is kept and just what your relation to your business is. You know it is quite possible that you will die sometime.

Keep your fire insurance policies in your safety deposit box, where they will not be burned with your house, and keep in the same package with them, plans and specifications of your house, so that the fire insurance companies can know definitely just how much it would cost to replace it. With your furniture insurance policy keep a detailed inventory of your household effects, with statement of their values. It would be impossible for you to do this from memory after the goods have been destroyed, and much needless trouble would necessarily ensue without such a list. And do not rely wholly upon your agent to renew your policies as they expire. Keep a list of the dates of expiry in your account book, where you will see them frequently.

Suppose you should be run over and killed today. Have you looked into the law of your state to ascertain whether or not your safety box would be sealed, and if it would be sealed are there any documents in it which your family would need before it were officially opened by your executors in the presence of a state officer? Your executors may take a year to settle up your estate. How about ready money for the use of your family?

When a man draws up his will it is seldom that he appreciates the fact that his cash in bank and the interest accrued on his investments up to the date of his death become principal and cannot be used by his family to pay their current expenses following his death.

An excellent way for a man to be sure that his family, upon his death, will have ready money at once, free from all complications, is to take out, in addition to his regular insurance, a policy for say $1,000 or $2,000 in favor of his wife or some member of his family.

This sum will have nothing to do with the legal formalities necessary in connection with the settling up of the estate and can be immediately collected and put in use.

Pistoles and Doubleloons.

The pistole was much used in Spain and Italy. Originally equivalent to about eleven old French livres, until about 1730 it seems to have been merely an irregular piece of gold. In common with the moldore, the sequin and the doubloon its value varied at different times and in different countries, usually being, however, about $3.75.

A Southern Antidote.

If Americans need an antidote for restlessness they can find it among the mountaineers of the south. It is said that when a native is asked to hurry he replies, "Don't forget there's a whole day tomorrow 'tain't been tetchet yet."—Detroit Free Press.

Dutch Etiquette.

In Holland etiquette demands that an unmarried woman walk on the right of her escort, while a married woman takes her husband's left arm.

Lost time is never found again, and what we call time enough always proves little enough.

THE GROWTH OF THE PLAYGROUNDS

Remarkable Development of the Movement in America.

ITS FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES

Herbert H. Weir, Field Secretary of the Playground Association of America For the Pacific Coast, Tells of the Birth and Life of This Movement.

The playground movement had its origin in the various social, educational, economic and civic problems growing out of the change from country to urban life, in an awakened conscience relative to the welfare of children and in a keener, more intelligent and sympathetic appreciation of young life in its right to be healthy, vigorous and happy.

Historically the movement began in Boston about 1886 and was concerned only with the needs and pleasures of little children. During the years intervening between that date and the first years of the last century the movement lay dormant. This was a period of tremendous city and town growth, of a wonderful increase in the intricacies and complexities of social, industrial, educational and civic problems. One great fact among many others borne up from the depths of the turmoil of conflicting forces of that time was that the children and the young people were finding themselves hard put to survive. The abnormal conditions of almost instantaneous city growth had come upon them unawares.

No age has, however, been without its visionaries who saw the light and led the way, so luckily there were men and women, especially women, who saw and understood and acted. The people of Chicago were the first to see that it was as important to provide for the play needs of the children and young people and for the recreational needs of all the people as it was to have efficient departments of public service, far more important also than to have efficient departments of public safety, for the safety of the people lies not in repression of the wrongdoer and in curing the maimed, the halt, the blind, but in preventing him from ever becoming a wrongdoer, from ever becoming diseased and inefficient, by giving him a better chance of being a healthy, vigorous and happy minded citizen.

Although in the beginning playgrounds were generally originated and managed under private auspices, and this still remains true in a large percentage of communities today, nevertheless the importance of the movement is such that it is now a settled principle that the organization, management and maintenance of playgrounds and other forms of recreation shall be under some regularly organized municipal authority and that the work should be supported by public funds.

The second principle is that there shall be provision made for all year round activity, otherwise it will be impossible to secure and keep a corps of efficient, well trained leaders and directors. This kind of work can be developed through use of school buildings for evening recreation purposes and through the construction of municipal recreation buildings, or through the use of other public buildings, or by utilizing all these agencies, as in the case of Columbus, O. The most economical, and perhaps the most effective, way is to utilize school buildings for this purpose, although there will always be need for special buildings in large cities at least, and in the case of school buildings there will have to be certain architectural changes in order to make the buildings very practical.

The third principle is that playground and recreation work must be in charge of trained leaders, directors and supervisors—men and women—skilled in calisthenics, gymnastics, athletics, plays and games, folk dancing, music, child hygiene, first aid to the injured, child psychology perhaps, having a knowledge of social conditions and relations, and, above everything else, filled with the spirit of childhood and possessing a wide social and spiritual vision. This type of man and woman is the great need of the movement today.

However, with the interest now being shown by universities, normal schools and colleges, inspired by the growing demand on the part of communities that teachers in the public schools should have some knowledge of play activities, as well as the demand for professional leaders and directors, the next half decade will find this weakness of the movement much lessened.—Herbert H. Weir in American City.
