Non-Speculative Insurance Guaranteed Policies.

A guaranteed policy means just what it says: there is no estimating of dividends, probable PREMIUM REDUCTIONS, or other vague or misleading propositions to confuse the mind.

There is no such thing as dividends on a life insurance policy to the insured. It is merely the return of the excess premium charged, decimated by the expense of handling and accounting. An overcharge to be returned eventually, if at all, and in which the insured beneficiary does not participate. Agents may tell you "the annual premium was reduced 50 much last year and it ought to do even better this year" but search the policy for such a guarantee, and you fail to find it. Take none but guaranteed policies, and you will always be pleased, not disappointed.

Every self respecting young lady of a marriageable age is justified in saying "No" to the young man who proposes marriage to her if he has not had business foresight enough to provide himself with an old line Life Insurance Policy, which in effect says: "This is for your protection in the event anything happens to me."

The time is past when intelligent men question the value of Life Insurance; every neighborhood has a live illustration in the shape of widows and children fighting for an existence. Suffering, ragged, uneducated offspring and a widow struggling to keep them together, is the poorest kind of a monument a prudent, loving and conscientious father can leave to mark his memory. Jails, reformatories, and the red light district are populated in the main from this class of unfortunates.

A Life Insurance Policy pays off the mortgage, the grocery bill, immediate expenses, educates the children and saves a home for the family. Many men in business today would be down and out had it not been for the commercial backing afforded them by an Old Line Life Insurance Policy.

Speaking of public benefactors, which is the greatest? The man who goes about doing good to the people, distributing GUARANTEED protection for the innocent and helpless in the event that the breadwinner is unexpectedly called hence, ministering to the things we know all about here, or the preacher, whose mission is to cite you to things celestial and prepare you for a more or less triumphant entry into the hereafter, which, at best, we know very little about? Anyhow it must be some consolation to the prepared one, when the light grows dim and the shadows grow longer, when the subject stares vacantly at his loved ones surrounding him as he takes his everlasting departure for the bright beyond, to know that while he has treasures laid up in Heaven awaiting him, his family has also been provided for, emergencies can be met, the mortgage paid, etc., and they will not want. A Guaranteed Policy in the AMERICAN CENTRAL LIFE protects them.

The man who insures his house or barn, for his own protection, and fails to insure his life for his family's protection, is a coward; they may never burn, he is sure to die. I buildings burn he can build others, if he dies without having acquired a competence for them, his family is left stranded, handicapped, by pressing emergencies and in despair.

Do it now; it may be too late tomorrow or next week. It's cheaper this year for you than it will be next; you're getting older all the time whether you think so or not. If you can find a man fifty years old with a family depending upon him for support who doesn't say, "I wish I had taken out a good sized policy in an old line company when I was younger," tell him, he's freak. E. S. GEAR, District Manager.

The Sabbath Day.

MR. EDITOR:

In reading over the article by our fellow citizen M. G. Pohl, entitled "The Sabbath Day" I am not at all surprised at the difficulties he has to contend with, nor if quotations mean anything the quotations from the scriptures given by the writer of the article in question, express unfamiliarity with the sayings ascribed to Jesus Christ, Son of God, as given to us in the four gospels of the New Testament.

Mr. Pohl may find his chief delight and happiness in the quiet of his home, in study and meditation, but the majority of the human race are not built that way. Friendship, friendly relationships, is the lubricant to the wheels of life that ease the friction of sadness, loneliness and discontent.

That it is not good for man to be alone is true in more senses than one. As to the ignorance the writer charges upon the religious teachers of the day, it seems to me as if Mr. Pohl is begging the question and that badly. If he, Mr. Pohl, would need to know what common sense teaches, let him turn to the New Testament scriptures for information, corroborated by the works of Josephus and Edersheim, (both intelligent Jews) all doubts will vanish from his mind. Let not our friend Pohl think that because he finds satisfaction in the "Akashic Records" he all have to quench our mental thirst there, any more than we can compel him to place his absolute confidence in the Bible as the only inspired and revealed will of God, which contains all things necessary to salvation (according to our understanding.)

If therefore, the individual of every kindred and nation and tongue will come to this fountain (the Bible), they may drink of the water of life freely, and there shall they learn that the nature and name of God the Father Almighty is love, for "God is love."

This true and holy love is within us in the earliest stages of our human existence, but through the perversity of sin, it requires the redeeming grace of God to regenerate revive that divinely given love, hence the need of atonement by the incarnate son of God, Jesus the Christ.

This explains the scriptural statement, "God is love," and "he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God and God in him." Until the individual enters this regenerate condition, there must be the restraint of a "Thou shalt not."

Too Inquisitive. "Bridget, didn't I hear you quarreling with the milkman this morning?" "Sure not! His hired girl's sick, an' I was inquirin' after her. But he's an impolite divil." "How's that?" "Says I, 'How's your milkmaid?' An' he looked mad an' says, 'That's a thrade secret.'"—Kansas City Journal.

A Mean Hint. "What did she play?" "The 'Last Hope'—such an appropriate selection!" "Why do you say so?" "Because it matched the expression of her hearers when they heard her begin it."—Baltimore American.
