E. E. Oakes was a Coquille business visitor Tuesday and Wednesday.

Key, S. R. Steele brought a couple of copies of the Dallas Texas News to this office, the other day. The News is one of the largest and best daily papers in the south.

Witter Water for your liver, kidneys and rheumatism. C. M. Spencer, Agent.

There was nothing doing in Bandon yesterday so far as celebration was concerned, and many of our citizens went to Fourmile, others to Marshfield and Myrtle Point, while still others formed private parties and spent the day on the beach and in the woods. Everybody had a good time.

For Carpet and Rug weaving, address Mrs. J. E. Foster, Bandon, 28-11

Mr. Averill leaves for the East Saturday to purchase his fall stock of Women's Suits, Dresses, Coats and Ready-to-wear. He will visit the leading manufacturers in quest of latest Fall styles, and told the Recorder today that it was his intention to buy very heavy in anticipation of early Fall trade. He believes the business done to date justifies him in buying the best goods possible to meet the demand.

WANTED—Work by the week at general house work. Apply Box 413 Bandon, Ore. 50 ft

C. E. Kopf received a telegram this morning announcing the death of his father, J. G. Kopf, which occurred at Maxwell, Iowa, at midnight last night. Mr. Kopf would have been 79 years old in September. The message was not wholly unexpected as Mr. Kopf had been in poor health for some time.

Fresh milk and cream for sale, delivered every evening.—J. N. Hosking, Farmer's phone 108. 50 ft

Dr. S. C. Eadicott and family left yesterday for a short outing to be spent on the east fork of the south fork of the Coquille river.

Mr. Joseph Kaiser and son of San Francisco, arrived Sunday to make the former's brother C. S. Kaiser of this city a short visit. They started out in their Oakland car, but after reaching Eureka and encountering the worst possible roads, shipped in here on the Alliance. Mr. Kaiser is a contractor and among the many big contracts taken there, built the Emporium building. Coos Bay Harbor.

WANTED—Work at cleaning windows, offices, stores or buildings of any kind, also calcimine and painting. Albert Rose, Popular Hotel.

C. P. Zeck has returned home to Bandon. He will in the future engage in an Associate Collection business in Bandon. His card will appear later.

Win. Candlin and wife were Bandon visitors Monday. They returned with a quantity of gravel from the seashore to add to the walk within their home grounds. They are ever on the alert to beautify their premises, not only within but without, keeping the grass and weeds cut about the side walks—a work if done by other property owners would add much to the appearance of the streets in the residence district.—Coquille Sentinel.

If not, bring it to us, as we make a specialty of carefully repairing ladies' and gentlemen's fine watches. P. C. Levar, an old-time Bay printer, has accepted a position with the Herald. We are pleased to secure the services of Mr. Levar as he is not only practical in all lines pertaining to printing, but is steady and can be relied upon.—Herald.

A wireless telegraph station is being established at Gold Beach, and the Globe observes that "the town no longer will be at the mercy of a bum telephone service."

The Tribune says that a party of northbound travelers who "nooned" on the old Fromm place near Port Orford, killed a sheep and were arrested. Had not one of them "fessed up and paid a $50 fine, it is probable the party would have "nighted" in jail.

If you want to hunt, fish, or get married, go to Oakes for applications for license. 24ft.

On the strength of a recent interpretation of the law closing the Rogue river to commercial fishing—that salmon caught with hook and line can be lawfully offered for sale in the open market, the Roberts Fish Co., has gone into the packing business at Gold Beach and offers fifty cents apiece for salmon. An effort will be made next fall to have the river reopened to seining.

AN ICEBERG'S SECRET.

One of the Mysteries of the Sea That Will Never Be Solved.

The age of an iceberg is problematic. The berg that sank the Titanic may have been forming on the coast of Greenland when Columbus crossed the sea or even before that. Then again it may have been reared by the elements since Peary's first expedition to the pole, but probably it antedated steamships by many years. In 1841 a great berg appeared off St. John's, N. F. Its pinnacle was fully a hundred feet above the sea, and its base formed a glittering island in the middle of which, imbedded between two hills of ice, were two ships side by side. The masts were gone, but otherwise the upper works seemed to be intact. Scattered about the decks were various objects that might have been the frozen bodies of the crews. All were covered with snow.

Several old sailors approached the berg as near as they dared to and scanned the ships through powerful glasses, but could not see any name or anything to indicate their nationality or business on the seas. There were no signs of life aboard them, nothing but the motionless masses under their white coverings.

They were believed to be part of Sir John Franklin's expedition and were seen at the mouth of the harbor almost stationary for several days. Then one morning the berg was gone, and the ultimate fate of the derelicts it carried is still one of the mysteries of the sea.—Miami Evening in New York Press.

A Fortune in His Legs.

During the reign of Queen Elizabeth an English gentleman of wealth named Corbet, of a distinguished family near Shrewsbury, bet that his leg was the handsomest in the country or kingdom and staked estates worth $400,000 on the subject. He won the wager, and a picture is still preserved in the family mansion representing the process of measuring the legs of the different contestants.

The Milky Way.

"Grandpa," said the small boy from the city, pointing to a wayside plant, "what is that?" "That's milkweed," was the reply. "Oh, I know," exclaimed the little fellow. "That's what you feed to the cows so they will give milk."—Chicago News.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

First on the Job.

The gong struck thrice. There was a wild rush, a tramping of feet, a word of command, the great doors flew open, the shining motor rolled into the street and turned to the east.

An alarm bell under the foot of the operator clattered noisily. Vehicles turned aside, pedestrians ran for their lives.

The motor suddenly stopped. A blazing structure barred the way. The crew whirled the motor into position. A stout armed fellow seized the crank handle and began to turn.

A rural onlooker turned to a native: "What the Sam Hill kind o' fire engine is that?" he asked in his rich alfalfa dialect.

"That ain't a fire engine," the native replied. "That's a movin' picture machine. They're always gettin' there first. Here comes th' department now."

And far down the street could be heard the clatter of the fire horses' coming hoofs.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Too Impulsive.

A southern woman who moved to the City of Mexico, where her husband was a railroad officer, had three exceedingly wide awake and lively small sons. Parental correction was frequently needed to keep them in bounds, and it was the habit of the mother to punish first and inquire afterward, she feeling that she could not go amiss.

One day, soon after her arrival in her new home, hearing a rumble and a crash in the next room, she jumped up and ran in to see what damage had been done. A handsome vase lay on the floor in fragments, and by it stood one of her sons with a startled look on his face.

Without asking any questions the lady laid him across her knee and started operations. At that moment other ornaments began to tumble off the mantel, and a couple of pictures dropped off the wall. So she stopped spanking.

She felt that it would be unfair to hold her son at fault for an earthquake.—Saturday Evening Post.

Always Standing Room Only.

Victor Murdock, who waves his aurora borealis hair up and down the United States in his lecture tours, reached a small western town one afternoon and went to a barber shop to be shaved.

"You are a stranger in this town, sir?" the barber asked.

"Yes," replied Murdock.

"We're having a good lecture here tonight," said the barber. "Victor Murdock is going to talk. He's a grand talker."

"So I've heard," agreed the lecturer.

"Have you got your ticket yet?" the barber asked.

"Not yet," replied the other.

"Then, sir, you'll have to stand."

"That's pretty tough!" exclaimed Murdock. "That fellow Murdock draws the biggest houses I ever heard of. I go to hear him whenever I am in town with him, and every time I have to stand."—Popular Magazine.

Taking Every Precaution.

Mr. Lansbury's concern, as expressed in the house, over the military drilling going on in the north of Ireland reminds one of a story of how Ireland was occasionally taught to shoot in the past. The war office once sent a famous officer over to inspect the militia regiments, and the officer, after inspecting, asked for a few words with the drill sergeant.

"These men of yours," he said, "could not hit a target as big as the Tower of London. You can't have taken much pains to teach them."

"Tache them to shoot!" gasped the sergeant. "Of course I did not tache them to shoot, yer honor, for, bedad, if I did there wouldn't be a landlord left in Munster."—London Chronicle.

Happy Childhood.

A boy in a certain state school for dependent children wrote his father thus: "Dear Papa—We children are having a good time here now. Mr. Sager broke his leg and can't work. We went on a picnic, and it rained, and we all got wet. Many children here are sick with mumps. Mr. Higgins fell off the wagon and broke his rib, but he can work a little. The man that is digging the deep well whipped us boys with a buggy whip because we threw sand in his machine and made black and blue marks on us. Earnest cut his finger badly. We are all very happy."—Youth's Companion.

Dangers of Art.

Art Connoisseur—Where did you get this dumb?

Friend—I picked it up in a studio, said something nice about it out of politeness, and the artist gave it to me.

Art Connoisseur (sadly)—You can't be too careful.—Judge.

A Property Sock.

"I think she will make a fine wife. I have been calling on her for several months now and nearly always find her darnin' one of her father's socks." "That caught me, too, until I found out it was the same sock."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Wars and Rumors of 'Em.

"Another war scare!" chuckled Senator Sorghum. "Why do you laugh? Are you not afraid of war?" "Yes. But there is a heap of difference between being afraid of war and being afraid of a war scare."—Washington Star.

READING IN BED.

Not Injurious to the Eyes if a Few Simple Rules Are Observed.

To those addicted to the practice of reading in bed the remarks of Dr. Carl Sailer will be of interest. He states that there is no valid reason to be urged against using the eyes in a proper manner in a recumbent position—such use is the least tiresome and can be persisted in for longer periods without damage than any other position.

We all know that grave damage is often done by reading in a recumbent posture, but therein possibly some oculists are at fault. Had it been the universal practice during the last twenty or thirty years to give careful directions how to read lying down instead of saying to one and all, "You must not read lying down," there would be less near sight and better eyes in the community than now exist.

Three easily avoided errors cause all the harm possible from reading lying down, the first often leading to the other two. They are insufficient or wrongly directed light, short reading distance and tipping the book out of the plane at right angles to the line of vision.

If, however, every one reading lying down will so arrange his lounge or bed that the light comes over the head without striking the eyes and falls well upon the page, if he will hold his book at a long reading distance and take care that the line of letters shall be at right angles to the line of vision, he can be sure of doing his eyes no more harm than if he were sitting up.

More than this, there is much positively in favor of reading lying down. Dr. Sailer concludes: "The recumbent posture allows more rest of the bodily structures than the sitting posture, and there is greater possibility of resting and repair in that position."—London Globe.
