Bandon Takes Out Banner Load of Lumber

When the Bandon cleared from this port last week she carried the largest load of lumber ever shipped from the Coquille river. With five hundred and thirty-five thousand feet of rough lumber from the Moore mill she was loaded to a depth of thirteen and three-tenths feet, but crossed out without touching at any place.

The combined loads of the Bandon and Fifield last week amounted to over a million feet of lumber besides the other freight. Both of the vessels crossed out after night with the aid of the new lights on the south jetty. These lights and the removal of the rocks from the harbor have made possible a great increase in shipping from this port.

Now if we are going to increase our shipping we must improve the means of transporting the products to this shipping center. These products are the lumber, matchwood and ties which come from the outlying districts, and if we are to see their output increase, we must have better roads. The outlying roads are practically impassible in the winter months. Let's do something.

Why not organize a Good Roads Association and then all fight together? we can not expect to succeed in getting good roads unless we all get together and demand good roads.

Much Shipping This Week

The Elizabeth arrived Saturday morning with 87 tons of freight and 17 passengers as follows: Mrs. O. A. Trowbridge, Spencer Trowbridge, Miss Strater, Miss Decker, P. J. Cordin, wife and son, J. D. Fairmons, C. C. Bunch, E. Fish, J. G. Webb and wife, Miss Mabel Norton, John Moore, H. J. Ott, J. Corkers and Sol Israel.

The Elizabeth sailed again Sunday night with 15 tons of miscellaneous freight, 290,000 feet of lumber, and 13 passengers as follows: Mrs. W. E. Field, Wm. Howell, F. C. Jackson and wife, J. L. Russell, J. C. Faller, C. E. Buck, H. H. Killen, C. Peterson, John Parkarmy, M. P. Lomp, W. E. Bigelow and Laura Long.

The Elizabeth will probably leave San Francisco for Bandon about Wednesday.

The Brooklyn left San Francisco for Bandon last night.

The Fifield will probably arrive in Bandon Thursday.

The Anvil arrived in port Sunday morning from Portland with 25 tons of freight and six passengers. She left again Sunday afternoon with two passengers.

Dr. S. C. Endicott has a new dental outfit in his office that is as modern as can be found in any city no matter how large. The chair is the latest design with all modern conveniences, and is made of solid mahogany with leather upholstery. He also has an electric machine for boring and cleaning teeth, an electric machine for polishing, and a fine mahogany cabinet with every convenience that can be imagined. In fact, there is everything that goes to make up a real modern dental parlor.

Mrs. J. L. Kronenberg and sons Jack and George accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Estabrook went over to the Bay Monday on Kronenberg's automobile.

A TRICKY TONGUE.

It Won Dean Spooner a Reputation For Unconscious Humor.

QUEER BLUNDERS OF SPEECH

Some of the Gams Attributed to the Old Dean's Habit of Interchanging the First Letters or Syllables of Words—American "Spoonerisms."

"Spoonerisms" is a recognized and accepted word used in the best circles of English society, even though it has not yet found its way into the dictionaries. Derived from the last name of the Rev. William A. Spooner, warden of New College, Oxford, it characterizes a curious sort of blunder that is habitual with that man—the unconscious interchanging of the first letters or syllables of words with what are often directly humorous results.

The most famous of all the stories about him tells how he once thundered out from the pulpit, "Jehovah was not on the side of the kinkering congs," meaning, of course, "conquering kings."

At another time he convulsed his audience by boldly stating that he held concealed a half wormed fish (half formed wish) in his bosom.

At a university dinner given at the time of Queen Victoria's diamond jubilee he proposed, "Three cheers for the queer old dean," and they were given with a will, in honor not only of the dear old dean whom he had wished to remember, but of the queer old dean who had forgotten himself.

Exasperated by a would be humorist among his pupils, he informed him that he had a "weeble fit," not meaning any new disease, but the old, old complaint of a feeble wit.

To another who had been mainly occupied in wasting two terms at college he complained, "You have been inordinably lazy and, to top it all, you have tasted two worms."

In quoting the familiar text, "Bow not thy knee to an idol," he made it, "Bow not thine eye to a needle."

One day he discovered a stranger sitting in his family pew. "Madam," whispered he, "do you intend to occupy this pie?"

Also he could blunder as blithesomely in action as in speech. One windy day, as he was walking down High street in Oxford, his hat blew off. He stooped to pick it up, but at that very moment a hen hurried by. He set off in full pursuit and never stopped until he had caught hold of the luckless hen on Magdalen bridge. Then and there he solemnly tried to put the bird on his head.

Such are a few of the blunders in word and deed that have been attributed to the "dear old dean." Must we accept them all as genuine? Not if we are to believe a contributor to M. A. P., who informed that paper that at a church congress a well known delegate said to him:

"Have you ever noticed how spoonerisms have died out since Canon Liddon is no more? I will tell you how it is. Liddon and I used to make them up. One of our best, which is always attributed to Spooner, is 'From Iceland's Greasy Mountains.'"

Spoonerisms at all events existed before Spooner himself was born. Some meritorious ones may be found in Moore's Diary. There is the story, for example, of an old actor named Parker, who used always to say the "poisoned pup" instead of the "poisoned cup." One night when he spoke it right the audience said "No, no!" and called for the other reading. Another actor mentioned in Moore made a great hit with the misquotation:

How sharper than a serpent's thanks it is to have a toothless child.

John Kemble was one night performing a favorite part in a country theater when he was interrupted from time to time by the squalling of a child in the gallery. At length, angered by this rival performance, Kemble walked with solemn step to the front of the stage and, addressing the audience in his most tragic tones, said, "Ladies and gentlemen, unless the play is stopped the child cannot possibly go on."

America itself is not without its Spooners and its consequent spoonerisms. There must have been at least three Spooners in the western court where the following scene is said to have taken place:

"How far is it between these two towns?" asked the lawyer.

"About four miles as the dows cries," replied the witness.

"You mean as the cry dows."

"No," put in the judge; "he means as the dy crows."

And then they all looked at one another, feeling that something was wrong.

A sort of conscious spoonerism was that brilliant jest credited to Dean Briggs of Harvard. During the year when the slogan "To hell with Yale!" first became popular among Cambridge undergraduates the dean, in company with Dr. Edward Everett Hale, was hurrying on his way to a great football game between Yale and Harvard.

"Where are you going?" asked another member of the faculty.

"To yell with Hale," answered Dr. Briggs.—Boston Post.

Mayor Mast started for Coquille on his run about Sunday but had a breakdown near Lampa and echina and the trip is another machine.

Monday M. G. Pohl, our local optometrist, returned from a three weeks' professional trip down the coast. He reports the roads excellent and our southern neighbors all healthy, prosperous and consequently happy.

The Diablo Vaudeville Co. will appear at the Orpheum Wednesday July 17th in comedy sketches, ballads and monologue.
