WHITE HOUSE DRESS IDEAS

That the extreme simplicity which has so far marked President Wilson's social policy is to be carried out in the regime of Mrs. Wilson as First Lady of the Land, is shown by the dress patterns chosen by Mrs. Wilson and her three daughters for the May issue of "Good Dressing," the new fashion magazine issued by Averill's.

Mrs. Wilson believes in purchasing clothes that are not extravagantly priced, and practicing just what she preaches, she does so without any sacrifice of style or quality. Those who have seen the purchases for her new role as mistress of the White House have been astonished at the simple elegance shown as well as the modesty of the prices paid. While her critics were saying "It could not be done," Mrs. Wilson has done it, and in June "Good Dressing," which Averill's will distribute free for the asking after June 5th, she and each of her daughters select dresses that prove the question.

"The Springtime Dress That Trims Itself" is another featured article in May "Good Dressing" that will appeal to many women who are perplexed as to how they may get a dress that is stylish, and at the same time within their means. It is an article illustrated by ten designs that are explained in detail and is novel as well as interesting.

Then Caruso, the world-famed Italian tenor, whose voice produces such a golden stream for his pocket book that a small fortune is paid him for an hour or two's singing each evening, speaks to the women of Bandon through June "Good Dressing." Caruso's contact with the best dressed women in each of the cities, both in America and abroad, in which he sings, makes his judgement particularly fitting and his first choice is a model that may be made of any fabric that has little body or stiffness, such as voile, crepe, dimity, the dotted and embroidered swisses, lansdowne, or any of the dainty silk and cotton mixture. His second choice is a beautiful modification of a draped tunic a charming afternoon and church dress if made of a dark violet crepe de chine with yoke of shadow net or less expensively of a Delft blue crepe or cotton voile.

In May "Good Dressing," too, there is a very interesting article describing in detail just What the New York Women are Wearing, and Nancy Norton writes another letter to her girl friends back home. Nancy Norton is a young miss attending boarding school in New York, and she writes entertainingly of the many interesting things she sees there and tells of the new materials and styles the stores are showing.

"Good Dressing" is edited by the editors of The Ladies Home Journal, and each month besides its distinctive fashion features gives such helps as How Can I Fix My Hat Over, When You Buy a Corset, How Can I Have Pretty Hair, etc. Each issue grows in interest, and with the May number a new department—Dressing the Children—is added. This new department will be edited by one of the best known and closest students of children's clothes needs, and it will be of great interest to mothers generally.

Averill's are able to issue "Good Dressing" through co-operation with 3,000 other leading American stores. This beautiful magazine costs about $100,000 a year to produce, but any reader of the RECORDER may get a copy by calling at the pattern department of Averill's.
