Many Kinds of Days In One.
A mean solar day is the average or mean of all the apparent solar days in a year. Mean solar time is that shown by a well regulated clock or watch, while apparent solar time is that shown by a well constructed sundial. The difference between the two at any time is the equation of time and may amount to sixteen minutes and twenty-one seconds. The astronomical day begins at noon and the civil day at the preceding midnight. The sidereal and mean solar days are both invariable, but one day of the latter is equal to 1 day, 3 minutes and 56.555 seconds of the former.

Buried Upside Down.
On Box Hill, in Surrey, may be seen the tomb of a man who was, by his own special request, buried upside down in a coffin placed in a marble casing. With his head to the earth and his feet to the sky he calmly awaits the judgment day, so the story runs, in the belief that heaven is under the ground and that, believing this, it was his duty to be buried with his head toward it.—London Tit-Bits.

Quick Mustard Plaster.
A trained nurse says that if one forgets the exact proportions for making a mustard plaster one can be quickly made by cutting a thick slice of bread, dipping it for just a second in hot water, then spreading with white of egg and sprinkling thickly with mustard. The egg will prevent blistering.—New York Times.

THE DAIRYMAN.
One of the easiest methods of increasing the dairy profit is to make every cow in the herd productive—that is, to eliminate the nonproducers.
An inexperienced man has no place on a dairy farm unless he is willing and anxious to learn.
Fine cornmeal for the skim-milk calf is a good substitute for the more expensive oilmeal.
To double the amount of milk per acre and cut the cost of milk production in two—build a silo.
The heifer bred too early at ways remains stunted in growth, and her milk flow is shortened for all time.
Lighting, ventilation and cleanliness must be practiced before best results can be secured in the dairy.

BEST MILKING METHOD.
Dry Hands Give Better Results Than Wet Hands.
The following essay, written by J. M. Peterson, Moorhead county, Minn., won the highest state premium in the dairy farm educational contests being conducted by the dairy and food department of the state of Minnesota, says Hoard's Dairyman. The subject for this contest was, "Which is the Best Method of Milking, Wet or Dry Hand, and Why?" The following is Mr. Peterson's essay:
In comparing different methods of milking there are three things, I believe, which ought to be considered as being of the greatest importance—namely, cleanliness, its effect upon the cow and rapidity.
The first named is the one which we need to consider the most, as it directly affects the quality of dairy products, for without a wholesome milk it is an absolute impossibility to bring out a good dairy product, no matter what is done to it.
After milk has once become dirty it may be strained ever so much and the essence of the dirt will still remain in the milk.
For this reason dry hand is better than wet hand milking, because if all external dirt and dust is removed from the udder and teats there still remains some dirt in the pores, which in wet hand milking is washed and worked out, as it were, and is constantly being drawn downward toward the end of the teats, where it will eventually join the milk.
The same holds true as regards the hands of the milker, for no matter how clean you may wash your hands there always remains some dirt in the pores, which will be worked out by wet hand milking.
Also in warm weather the hands will perspire more or less, and this perspiration will also join the milk in the manner described above.
Now as to the effect on the cow of dry and wet hand milking. To obtain the best results the time of milking must be as pleasant to the cow as any other.
For this reason, too, I believe, dry hand milking should be preferred, as it will irritate less the delicate tissues of the udder and teats. Also in cold weather the teats are not so liable to become chapped and cracked and consequently sore when dry hand instead of wet hand milking is used.
Then it is possible to milk a good deal more rapidly with dry hands than with wet. This may seem a mere trifle at first glance, but still if you only gained a minute's time per cow at each milking on a herd of fifteen cows you would be one-half hour ahead each day, which if summed up for the month and the year would mean a considerable saving in time.

Horse Indigestion.
For a horse afflicted with chronic indigestion and an abnormally loose condition of the bowels the following treatment is recommended: Feed about one-half an ordinary ration and let it consist of five parts of whole oats and one part of wheat bran dampened with water at time of feeding. Always give the drinking water before feeding. Do not work the animal soon after a meal, but see that it is worked or abundantly exercised every day. Feed mixed clover and timothy hay or straight timothy hay and give most of it at night. Allow free access to rock salt. If the horse eats its bedding use planing mill shavings or sawdust in place of straw. After feeding in this manner for a couple of weeks, should the trouble persist, mix in the feed twice daily one tablespoonful of a mixture of two parts powdered wood charcoal and one part each of granular hypophosphite of soda, powdered nuxvomica and ground gentian root.—Farm Journal.

Preventing Udder Troubles.
"Dairywomen would have themselves an immense amount of worry, work and loss if they instantly isolated a cow when anything is seen to be wrong with her udder," says Dr. A. S. Alexander of the College of Agriculture of the University of Wisconsin. "Infection from germs is present in nearly all cases of mammitis (garget) of the udder. The infection is often carried from the diseased cow to other cows by the milker's hands, or the infection spreads from stall floors and gutters contaminated by milk or pus from a caked udder. The contents of a diseased udder should never be milked on to the stall floor. The affected cow should be milked last or by some one who does not milk the other cows. All milkers should be careful to wash their hands frequently and to keep their fingers quite short and clean."
