BEER IN ANCIENT ENGLAND.

When the Law Demanded "Drynke" For the King's Subjects.

Authorities in England formerly took pains that the Londoner should not miss his full share of ale. In the sixteenth century, for instance, the brewer who ceased to brew was faced with the loss of his business. Thus, if the mayor got wind of "any of the said brewers, of their frowarde and perverse myndes, shall at any time hereafter soderly forbear and absteyne from brewing, whereby the king's subjects should be destitute or unprovided of drynke," he knew exactly what to do. The city council was empowered to take over the business as a going concern and to take measures to see that it was kept going.

The cry then and for centuries after was all for beer. There is record of a petition of 1673, for instance, praying that tea, coffee and brandy be banned. The petitioners reasoned that the laborers needed "good strong beer and ale," which "refreshed their bodies and neither did them prejudice nor hindered their work."

Besides, it cost little and was the product of home grown grain, whereas the new fangled drink was expensive and destroyed his majesty's subjects, "not agreeing with their constitution." Chicago News.

LIGHT AND HEAT.

How They Reach Us From Out the Icy Coldness of Space.

In answer to the question, "It is thought that in space eternal cold and darkness prevail—what then is the explanation of the fact that both light and heat from the sun, some 90,000,000 miles away in cold space, reach the earth?" Edgar Lucien Larkin in the New York American says:

"Heat and light as such do not reach the earth from our own and 100,000,000 more suns. Radiant energy is transmitted by undulations or waves in electrons, which energy is in the forms of waves of varying lengths and amplitudes. When some of these energy impulses impinge on matter able to receive and appropriate them heat and light result.

"Many molecules in many thousands of kinds of matter are able to translate energy waves into heat, while others are translated as light on the retina of the eye and in the brain. But no heat or light develops until the waves strike forms of matter fitted to receive, appropriate and translate. "Thus energy will pass through a burning glass made of lens converge to a focus and set light objects on
