Hunting Sea Lions

George Forty made a trip to Coos Bay last week, returning Friday on the Rustler. He went to make arrangements to secure a boat for use in his annual sea-lion hunt. Mr. Forty is the most expert and experienced sea-lion hunter along the coast and with two or three helpers he kills several hundred lions each season, from which he realizes from $6.00 to $8.00 a piece.—Port Orford Tribune.

STRICKEN BANDON

Bandon, the beautiful City-by-the-Sea, lies stricken, smoke stained, fire-scarred in a heap of ashes today. She has been subjected to the most serious and severe loss ever sustained by a city in Coos county, if not in southwestern Oregon.

Assurances of sympathy and more substantial assistance, if needed, will be forthcoming from all her sister cities in Coos county.

Coos Bay extends its most sincere sympathy to the stricken city. Our hands and hearts go out to her today. Marshfield and North Bend business men hurried to the burning city when the first news came, to see if they could aid in any way in stopping the disastrous flames that were eating the heart out of that thriving city.

Bandon business men are the kind that cannot be disheartened or destroyed by disaster. They are made of sterner stuff. While the destruction and damage is almost appalling, it will not be permitted to stop the onward march of that enterprising community.

A serious phase of the disaster is that because of the small insurance carried, the loss will fall heavily on the business men.

The Times knows the temper, the energy and enterprise of Bandon business men and knowing, feels assured a bigger, better and more prosperous Bandon will arise Phoenix-like from the ashes of the old.—Coos Bay Times.

A GRIEVANCE IN CURRY

The people in Curry county seem to have a well-founded grievance against the postoffice officials at Washington, as word has been received at Gold Beach, the county seat of Curry, that all bids for carrying the mails between Gold Beach and Harbor have been rejected and that after July 1st the only way to get mail from the county seat to the lower portion of Curry county will be to send it to Port Orford, thence by stage to Bandon, thence up the Coquille river by boat to Coquille, thence by rail to Myrtle Point, thence by stage to Roseburg, thence over the Southern Pacific to Grants Pass, thence through the Illinois valley and over the Siskiyou to Crescent City, thence up the coast to Harbor. In all this makes a distance of about 425 miles to gain a distance of forty-two miles. Under such conditions it would take mail, in the best of weather, from eight to eleven days to pass from Gold Beach to Harbor; in winter from ten to fifteen days.

The contract price for carrying mail over these forty-two miles, making three round trips a week, has been about $1250. This was for a horseback and pack animal route. Under the best conditions the contractor could only make a very small wage; since the parcel post law became effective every trip has shown a loss. Hence the lowest bid received prior to the letting for the next four years was $4,000. The officials say this price is prohibitive; hence all bids have been rejected.

Just now the greatest developments in Curry are taking place at Brookings just north of and across the Chetco river from Harbor. The largest town in the county has sprung up there as if by magic. More than 350 people are now located there and this number is being daily augmented. When the Brookings sawmill gets under full way, within a few weeks, the population will begin to swell still more rapidly. The Brookings company has a large amount of good farm land to put on the market in small tracts in the hope that settlers will purchase it to raise supplies for the new town. Homes will be sold to the working men. There will be much business of all sorts with the county seat. But in plain language the postal officials say that the distance to the county seat is 425 miles; the quick transit for a letter eight days—which in the winter season will more often be twelve to fifteen days.—Oregonian.
