THREE NOTCH ROADS.

Their Curious Title Comes From the Name of George III.

In Missouri and some other central western states there are roads that are called "three notch roads." They are public highways as distinguished from the roads that lead to a sawmill, a schoolhouse, a church or an isolated farmhouse. A three notch road "goes somewhere." Proceeding along such a road, the traveler is bound, in time, to reach a town.

There lies behind the curious title an interesting story. It appears that King George III, decreed that all English public roads, as king's highways, should be marked with his name. In the colonies it was often impossible to mark the roads with the care and thoroughness that were used in England, and in the wilderness it was enough to cut three notches on the largest trees along the roads.

After the Revolution, of course, the name of King George was omitted, but the three notches proved useful as a means of marking public roads. Virginia colonists, it is said, carried the practice into Tennessee, Kentucky and Indiana, and their children, in turn, carried it into Missouri.

Originally Missouri had no counties. Later, when they were formed, the state decided that if the task were left to the counties there would be little road building. Accordingly, the state constructed the roads and marked them with three notches. Later, when the counties undertook to build roads, they were designated in the timber country by two notches. Prior to and during the war between the states the distinction was preserved, and three notch roads were always "through roads" that led from one town of importance to another. Two notch roads were less important highways, and roads not notched at all were either rail roads or plank roads. A rail road was a road leading to a camp where men split rails, and a plank road led to a sawmill.—Youth's Companion.

NOT CERTAIN, BUT HOPEFUL.

Willie Clearly Diagnosed the Case in His Letter to His Aunt.

Dear Auntey—I did not rite to you for a long time now witch is not credit to me he yooosoo have an aunt very much like you and he did not rite to her for a long time and one day his muther came in very sad and said to Henry your aunt dido yesterday and when he thought of how she dido without getten an ansur to her last letter it almost broak his hart and for a long time he could not eat the rest of his dinner.

The trouble is that when we are young and helthy we do not think of how our relatives are old and apoo die any time at all and so we do not rite as often as we otto and are sorry afterward when it is too late.

Henry Begz was tellen me about his aunt yesterday and how she yooosoo send him presunts and sumtimes munney when there was a serkus comen which the neerest one now is two weeks from Wensday.

This makes it all the sadder for Henry. The price of tickets to a serkus is a kworter, for boys the sighs of us and, Henry's aunt yooosoo always send him fifty sene for two tickets if he should wante take another boy with him as they often do.

The serkus witch is comen here two weeks from Wensday is Simmons & Sapp's world's greatest nickel plated three rings ne plus ulter peerless aerial marvel equine sensation and zoologic azeration with the world famous Roamin Hippedroom and selected artusts in the sublimest spectacles ever staged for the edification of Man witch I copied from the bills as nearly as possibul, and it looks as if it was goen to be a pretty good show.

I gess all the boys are goen except Henry and me witch are not surten but hoapful. Two weeks from Wensday.—Saturday Evening Post.

Brief illness Beneficial. There are some who confess that they never really read, or appreciated their daily paper until they had to stay in bed to read it and suddenly discovered it was rather good reading. And I know men who rent pleasant houses in delightful suburbs, yet scarcely ever see them until a blessed pain occurs and they stay at home for a few days in bed. A few days "bedding out" might do many human plants a lot of good.—London Chronicle.

Napoleon's Generals. Many of Napoleon's generals rose from the ranks. Bernadotte, the grandson of a blacksmith; Murat, the son of a tanner; Lannes, the son of a small farmer; Ney, the son of a poor Alsatian cooper; Sichel, the son of a silk weaver; Jourdan, the son of a country leech; Mortier, a brewer's boy; Godnot, a farmer lad; MacDonald, grandson of a Uist crofter; and Lefebvre, a barrack room trat.

Proud Recollection. "You seem rather elated this morning."

"I am," replied Mr. Meekton. "Last night my wife mistook me for a burglar. It's the only time in my life that Henrietta was actually afraid of me."—Washington Star.

Domestic Jar. She—My dear mother beared me not to marry you. He—True! That's the only time she seemed interested in my welfare.—Judge.
