Queer Things That Turn Up In the News

J. L. Hart of Kansas City, Mo., in an advertisement stated that at three elections some one else had voted for him before he arrived at the polls.

Five Wellesley college girls are working two weeks behind Boston department store counters to help raise funds for a new college dormitory.

Henry Dorman, said to be the oldest man in the United States, is dead at Lamar, Mo., in his one hundred and sixteenth year. He fought through the civil war in the Seventh Michigan regiment.

At an auction sale at Lexington, Ky., fifty-two and a half acres of land which were sold in a block comprised a mythical city of Grand. For twenty-five years it has existed only on paper, without streets or houses.

A horse has been ordered to report to the superior court of Rockingham county, N. H., and is at present being supported on the county farm in Brentwood until the court convenes in April. The horse figures in litigation.

EXPECT CHILD WILL SEE THROUGH EYE OF A PIG.

Surgeons Anticipate Successful Outcome of Remarkable Operation.

An operation which marks a new step in surgery has been performed in the Baltimore Eye, Ear and Throat hospital. The entire cornea of the eye of a pig was taken out and grafted on the eye of a three-month-old boy. The little patient is David Kane, who was blind at birth.

It is said by the surgeons at the hospital that every indication points to success, although the grafting of an animal's cornea on a human being has never before succeeded.

In former operations the cornea used was that of a rabbit. The recent operation was the first in the history of surgery to be performed with the eye of a pig.

Several weeks ago, by a more ordinary operation, the sight of the boy's right eye was made almost perfect. The condition of the left eye necessitated the use of the pig's cornea.

In the last operation the pig was chloroformed, the eyeball taken out and the cornea cut from it. An extraordinarily fine needle and fine silk were used in putting the cornea in place until it has grown to the child's eyeball.

Two cases are said to be on record where the grafting of human corneas gave sight to totally blind eyes.

FISH AS CHICKEN FEED.

Valuable Byproduct Utilized in the Herring Oil Industry.

A new development in a comparatively new industry is announced by Phillip G. Funcke, president of an Alaskan company engaged in the extraction of oil from the herrings which swarm in the northern waters. It is the utilization of the byproducts as poultry food.

"When the fish are brought to the factory," says Mr. Funcke, "the catch is divided into five lots and distributed in equal portions. After being thoroughly boiled in huge vats the fish are forced through giant rollers, the oil flowing into receptacles provided for it and the crushed fish falling down a chute to the floor below. Here the fish are again compressed to extract the remainder of the oil, and the guano or residue is boxed up for the market. The guano was formerly sold as fertilizer, but by a special process much of it is now mixed with a small percentage of the oil and becomes an excellent poultry food.

"Analysis of the new food proves it to be rich in protein, which is one of the most valuable elements in a poultry food, and an added percentage of lime from the bones of the fish tends to make shell for eggs when fed to laying hens."

One Man Applauded.

Camille Saint-Saens was present when Verdi's "Hymn of All Nations" was rendered for the first time at the opening ceremonies of the world's fair in London, and he gave this reason for the "failure" of the composition: "The hymn was arranged to introduce the national anthem of the various countries, and, not knowing that the 'Marseillaise' was at that time in bad repute, it was used as representative of France. The Emperor Napoleon when he heard the strains turned pale, and the knowing ones in the audience were so greatly embarrassed that no one in the great throng dared applaud. Yes, one man did applaud, and that was I. Napoleon arose in his box and directed his opera glass toward me, and I looked at him through my glass. After a few moments the emperor hurriedly departed."

Gave Him a Christian Name.

Even the polyglot Swiss interpreter at the general postoffice admits that there are languages which would stump him. How would he have solved the problem once presented at the Hampstead Green postoffice and recorded in Baines' "On the Track of the Mail Coach"? Two ladies wanted to send a money order to a foreign tradesman in Oxford street. "What Christian name?" inquired the clerk. "He is a Turk and has none." "We must have a Christian name," the clerk insisted. "But you can't. His bill merely says 'Kotzemollen.'" "Oh, very well," decided the clerk. "That will do. Cut his name in two and make the order payable to 'Kotze Mollen.'" Solomon could not have done better.—London Chronicle.

The Parson's Soft Job.

"There is a prevalent idea among the criminal classes that the clergy have nothing whatever to do."

The authority for this statement is the archdeacon of London, who has three large prisons in his archdeaconry. An old woman once said to a jail chaplain: "I wish you could find a job for my old man. He is not up to much and cannot do anything, but he wants a soft job like yours!"—London Globe.

Willing to Take a Tip.

"Look here," said the sophomore's father, "how do you expect to do any studying if you're going to be out tearing around every night until 11 to 12 o'clock?"

"Darned if I know, dad. I wish you'd put your mind to work on the matter and let me hear from you if you succeed in working anything out."—Chicago Record-Herald.
