W. J. Sweet and family and Mrs. T. P. Hanley returned Tuesday night from their California trip and report a most pleasant trip. They were driven on the trip by E. B. Henry in his Chalmers and had no trouble on the entire trip except a couple of blowouts. They visited Crescent City, Eureka, Ferndale and other points.

J. E. Ford, manager of the Coos County Meat Co., is over from Marshfield today looking after business on this end of the line. The Coos County Meat Co. has a slaughter house near Parkersburg, where they do all the killing for the three markets connected with the company. The Bandon Market in this city is furnished with beef from this company, and one market at Coquille and one at Marshfield.

It is expected that within two months there will be train service between Eugene and the head of navigation on the Siuslaw. If this should prove correct, it is more than probable that an auto line from Coos Bay, on the beach route, will be established to the lower Siuslaw, connecting by river boats with the railroad at Mapleton. This would be an easier and better route every way than the present route to the railroad via Gardiner, Scottsburg and Drain.—News.

After clipping almost verbatim The Recorder's account of the accident which resulted in the beheading of the launch "Queen" and the power life boat "Defiance," the Coquille Herald has the nerve to charge the Recorder with appropriating its version of the affair. As a matter of fact the Recorder was issued four days ahead of the Herald and it would have been "going some" for us to have anticipated what Brother Herald was going to say. Better back up, old man, and change the brand.

"STRANGER" PRAISES BANDON PUBLIC LIBRARY

Editor Recorder:—One of the first things noticeable in a port city, such as Bandon, by one whose life has been spent inland, is the gray tones to most all surroundings. It's unfortunate that the color gray is so intimately connected with two disagreeable ideas—decay and chill. Without analyzing my own thoughts I am apt, by viewing the gray buildings, streets, cliffs and ocean, and being surrounded by the neutral chromatic values on all sides, to be at first impressed that Bandon is essentially a decaying and chilling community and unless met by an unusual warmth of reception by its citizens and an alertness decidedly enlivening, retain in memory a disagreeable impression as a stranger and a visitor.

As Woodrow Wilson charges, our industrial impression, the fault is purely psychological—a flaw in my own composition. However, not everyone is going to take the pains to diagnose the trouble, and this five city must inevitably suffer harm to a modest extent no doubt, by an inability or inertness of visitors to find for themselves those spots that contain remarkable color—and by that I don't necessarily mean house paint or hollyhock blossoms—but the subtler mental colors; those sensitive to more than the mere sense of vision.

I found such a spot, and very glad I was to spend an hour there. An artistic touch, such as your public library in a city that even you will confess is not overly artistic critically, is a tremendous boon to eyes tired by long contemplation of dismal, gray reaches of sand and surf.

Furnished in warm brown, suggesting comfort and relaxation, with open rafters above and long, convenient racks of tastefully selected books, neat arrangement of windows, combined with the warm courtesy of the gracious librarian, I want to say that I think no similar institution in this state compares in artistry with your present temporary library building. I hope when the permanent one is erected, as I understand it will be soon, that the present color scheme will be carried into it, and force out the use of gray granite pillars, gray cement stucco work, gray stone floors and gray terra cotta, such as is so often used for public buildings. Nature provides plenty of grayness on the Pacific coast, but there are a few things we human beings feel we can do in a manner somewhat superior to old Mother Nature.

It has taken many words to express my appreciation of the one place where an utter stranger is made to feel at home, where no pay is asked for hospitality extended, and I want to say again, that your public library does much to relieve a visible and mental gray prospect to
A STRANGER

UNREQUITED LOVE CAUSES SUICIDE AT COQUILLE.

Coquille.—Leroy Casey, a young man of 23, committed suicide Friday evening near Lee by shooting himself through the heart with a 25-20 carbine. The cause of his act was the fear that a young lady with whom he had been keeping company had transferred her affections to some one else.

The young man came here about two years ago from Walla Walla, where his father resides, and had been working for Mr. King on the Winsor & Falkenstein ranch a mile above the Fox bridge on the north fork. Revival meetings had been in progress near by, and it is said that the young lady had attended in company with another man. On Friday evening Casey had a conversation with her and asked her if she had gone back on him. She treated the matter lightly and avoided a direct answer. Then he told her if she deserted him he would kill himself. She did not think him in earnest. This was about 7:30. About 9 o'clock, after Mr. and Mrs. King had retired and Mr. King had gone to sleep, Mrs. King heard Casey come into the large tent in which they were all sleeping, go to the corner in which two guns were kept, and go out again. She arose and went to the corner, finding that the carbine was missing. She awakened her husband, but he thought little of the matter. Then she heard the report of a gun a short distance away. When the people returned from the meeting a search was made and the body found lying across the gun. The young man had evidently held the short barreled carbine out in front of him and pulled the trigger with his finger, the bullet passing through the heart and ranging downward.

A message was sent to the father and he gave instructions to have the body buried here, stating that he could not come.—Herald.
