

LUCILLE LOVE AT THE GRAND

THE SEVENTH INSTALLMENT OF THIS ENTERTAINING MOVING PICTURE SERIAL HAS MANY THRILLS

The seventh installment of "Lucille Love," the girl of mystery, is as good as anything that has preceded it in this popular serial. The story of this installment runs like this:

"After numerous stirring adventures by land and sea in her effort to regain the papers which will save her father from dishonor, Lucille Love and Hugo Loubeque, her father's enemy, find themselves adrift in an open boat off the coast of China. The papers, possession of which both are fighting for, are now in the hands of Captain Wetheral of the ship from which Lucille and Loubeque were cast adrift.

"The enmity between Lucille and the spy dies down when they find themselves in the same boat at the mercy of the waves and wind. They are a man and woman fighting against death. When Lucille awakens from her first sleep of trouble and exhaustion, she learns from Loubeque that the water barrel has sprung a leak and is empty. In the days that follow Loubeque proves to be a man, indeed. As a result of thirst and exposure Lucille becomes delirious and it is only by use of main strength that Loubeque keeps her in the boat. After many days, however, the outcasts land on the coast of China. Lucille is ill and the spy turns her over to an old Chinese woman. Howbeit, as soon as one danger is averted another springs up. The Chinese woman no sooner sees the costly necklace which Lucille wears than she decides to steal it. Lucille learns of the plot, and when the thieving woman and a confederate come to rob her she is prepared. In self-protection she shoots the Chinese woman and uses the confederate to cover her retreat. In the mean time Hugo Loubeque has gathered a force of men and attacked Captain Wetheral's ship which rides in the harbor. Loubeque takes the precious documents from the captain and has him thrown into prison. Loubeque then opens negotiations with a Chinese merchant which results in his signing an agreement to smuggle ammunition to the port. Lucille learns from the imprisoned sea captain that Loubeque has again come into possession of the papers. The captain however has retained Loubeque's diary, and this he gives to the girl. While shadowing Loubeque Lucille learns of his intended smuggling operations, and when the occasion offers she steals Loubeque's signed contract with the Chinese merchant, with the intention of using it as a lever to force the stolen documents from him. The girl, however, is now in a new predicament. Loubeque has regained possession of his ship and intends sailing immediately for the United States, where the papers will be used to dishonor her father. She hides on the wharf and watches Loubeque board the ship. It will sail within a few minutes, and whatever she does must be done quickly."

EUROPE TORN BY CONFLICT

From all reports a great European war, which may change the map of the whole world, is on. Austria-Hungary, England, Germany, Russia, France and Serbia are already engaged in actual war and it will only be a matter of a short time until the neighboring countries will be drawn into it for self preservation.

England, France and Russia are arrayed against Germany and Austria-Hungary. Italy, Germany's ally, and Japan, England's ally, will come into the scrimmage if their services are needed. It is said that Turkey has a well-trained army which will be put at the disposal of the highest bidder. Altogether, it is estimated that in the event of a general European war, ten million men will meet on the various battle fields.

The United States will make every effort to remain neutral. President Wilson has proposed that Congress pass a measure waiving the restriction on American registry for foreign ships the idea being to have all merchant vessels engaged in world traffic come under the U. S. flag and thereby enable them to continue in trade without molestation.

Yesterday's news reports reported a disastrous naval battle in the North Sea between England and Germany, which resulted in a loss of six vessels for Germany and two for England.

A battle between France and Germany Sunday resulted in a rout for the German troops.

Numerous small engagements on the Russian frontier between German and Russian troops are reported.

Prices on food stuffs in Europe are soaring and some of the smaller countries are already facing famine.

England it is said has provisions for only about a month. Money is almost impossible to get and many of the financial institutions are facing ruin.

That the war will have considerable of an effect in this country is evidenced by the order already sent out that no more orders will be taken for future four deliveries at the present prices.
