COMING—"THE GAMBLERS"

"The Gamblers" a particularly fine picture play in five parts, by Charles Klien, will be shown at the Grand theatre Sunday, Sept. 6.

Following is the story as told in pictures:

Isabel Emerson and Catherine Spencer are old school friends and it is the great wish of Isabel that Catherine shall marry her brother Wilbur.

James Darwin, a young attorney, in the interests of business comes into the life of the Spencer family and falls in love with Catherine. Wilbur is so immersed in business that he does not play the love game satisfactorily and Darwin wins out. Catherine tells Darwin that she does not love him really strong but he persuades her that she will in time and they get married. Catherine in a burst of confidence tells Darwin that she really was in love with Wilbur, and the husband being of a jealous disposition, the drifting apart begins. Wilbur in desperate effort to amass a fortune gets his fellow directors to go into a precarious scheme to extend their banking operations and Emerson senior endorses them. For a time things go well until the rival bankers smell a mouse and commence an investigation which may mean states prison for some of the party, as the Emerson chain of banks are operating illegally. The attorney general calls on Darwin to investigate. Wilbur scores the streets for money to cover risky notes. Darwin attacks the weakest link—one of the stockholders, named Cowper, and he agrees to turn states evidence. Cowper steals the notes and substitutes forged ones. Wilbur pockets the substitute notes and returns to his room, where he finds the investigators in charge. Darwin at home finds Catherine about to go to a ball given by Isabel and tells her she cannot go. After he leaves for the meeting she goes anyway. Darwin learns that he must go to Washington and returns home for his bag. Learning that Catherine has disregarded his command he goes to Emerson's for her, she refuses to leave until the husband partly explains. Cowper, realizing what it means to go to jail starts for Darwin's house with the notes and leaves them on Darwin's desk, the maid only being present. Wilbur returns home and finds detectives watching the house; his colleagues are then notified of the situation confronting them. Emerson is heartbroken and toasts on standing his share of the trouble, but Wilbur manages to take the burden on his own shoulders. He gets Cowper to make a confession and goes to secure the notes. By a clever ruse he gets into the library where the package is, but is discovered by Catherine. She secures the package and despite his pleadings refuses to part with it. Darwin returns and confronts Wilbur, who trying to explain the situation makes matters worse. Darwin believes Wilbur came to see his wife. Wilbur is arrested for misuse of the notes, he makes a full confession and offers himself to the law. Catherine leaves Darwin for good, declares her love for Wilbur and promises after securing her divorce to wait for him.

MARSHFIELD NEWS.

From the Coos Bay News:

The Coos Bay Water company is doing its own work in the matter of clearing and grading for the big reservoir, the bids submitted being considered too high. The reservoir will be about 400 feet in length, 150 feet wide and 22 feet deep, capable of holding 3,000,000 gallons.

Floyd Perkins, who played this season with the Moose Jaw team in the Canadian baseball league, returned to his home at Gardiner last week. The league blew up when the war broke out, and the clubs quickly disbanded.

Chas. Hickox was fined $25 and costs yesterday by Justice Pennock, on the charge of running deer with dogs preferred by Jim Thomas, deputy game warden.

The will of the late Bluford Davis of Coos River, was opened and read in Hall & Hall's office Thursday when it was learned that he had bequeathed everything he possessed to his wife. The value of the estate is estimated at $60,000, though some claim that the Coos river ranch alone is worth fully that amount.

George Stemmerman of the east fork of the North Coos river, died at the Mercy hospital Sunday night. Mr. Stemmerman was born in California and came to Coos Bay with his parents about 45 years ago. He conducted a livery barn on Pine street in Marshfield when a young man, and afterwards moved to Coos river, where he has been engaged in logging and farming. He was about 65 years old, and is survived by his wife and one son.

A big landslide occurred at the McLain & McLean rock quarry on South Coos river Thursday night. Considerable damage was done, including the wrecking of the derrick used for loading rock, sinking of a scow and the filling up of the quarry with trees, earth, etc. It is considered lucky that the slide occurred at night, as had it occurred during the working hours it is very probable that some lives would have been lost.

FOLLOW FEDERAL GAME LAWS

Portland—Game bird shooters of Oregon and, in fact, the whole northwest, have been in a quandary as to whether to be governed by the federal or state game and fish laws. As federal laws have precedence over state laws in conflicting sections and paragraphs hunters will save themselves trouble and worry by following the federal regulations.

When the federal laws were issued last year, sportsmen of District No. 1 of Oregon, which comprises all counties west of the Cascade mountains, were cut out of 15 days' shooting at the opening of the season, but were allowed 15 days' additional shooting at the close.

Under the new federal laws the duck and geese season in District No. 1 will open on October 1 and will close on January 15, and in District No. 2, which comprises all counties east of the Cascade mountains, the season for ducks and geese will be the same as in District No. 1.

The season for rails in both districts will be from October 1 to January 16 and the shore bird season will be from October 1 to December 1st.

Under the state law hunters in District No. 2 would be allowed to shoot ducks and geese from September 15 to February 15, except in Harney, Malheur, Lake and Grant counties, when the season was from September 15 to March 15. In Baker county the season lasted until April 1.

The federal law provides that the time of hunting be from sunrise to sunset. This cuts one hour off the length of time allowed by the state laws. The new laws do not change the bag limits.

William L. Finley, state game warden, states that the state board of fish and game commissioners would observe the federal laws and game wardens throughout the state will be notified that federal laws will hold in places where they conflict with state laws.

During the past year two cases where shooters have violated the federal laws have been brought up in the federal courts and the decisions rendered in each differed. In one case, which was brought before a North Dakota judge, the law was declared constitutional and the violator fined $100. In a case in the Arkansas federal district, the law was declared invalid. It is likely that the cases will be passed to the supreme court for decisions.

FLORENCE SALMON CANNERY WILL OPERATE THIS YEAR

Florence—Kyle & Sons have made arrangements to operate their salmon cannery this year and their crew of Chinese will arrive in a few days. On account of the condition of the salmon market Kyle & Sons had not expected to run the cannery this fall, but the prospect for an advance in price leads them to try it again. A machine for filling the cans has been ordered and will be here in time for the season's work. This will materially reduce the labor of handling the fish and put the cannery in position to handle a good sized pack. The members of Siuslaw local No. 17, United Fishermen of the Pacific, have been salting their fish, but have arranged with Kyle & Sons to take their catch to the cannery after that establishment starts up.—Florence West.

Labor Day Services.

The sermon themes at the Methodist Church next Sunday morning and evening will be suited to religious observation of Labor Day. The "sons of toil" are especially invited to attend these services, in which the dignity and necessity of honest activity will be discussed.
