BANKED ALL HIS MONEY.

Then Exploited His Views on the Use of a Check Book.

During a financial stringency some years ago a Swedish farmer in one of the middle west states had sold some hogs on the local market and upon receiving his check in payment immediately went to the local bank to realize on his sale. Upon presentation of the check the banker said to him, "Do you wish the money on this check?"

"Well, I tank I yust so vell take him," was the quick reply.

"You really want the money?"

"Yab, I tank I take the mon-e."

"But do you really need the money?" asked the banker.

"Vell, no; I don't exactly need him, but I tank I take the mon-e."

"Well," said the banker, "if you really want the money of course I will give it to you, but I thought if you did not need it perhaps you might open an account and deposit the money and then check against it as you needed it."

"Den ven I send my shecks here you will refuse to pay dem."

"Oh, no, we won't. If you open the account we will pay your checks whenever they come in."

This seemed assuring to the Swede, and he said, "Vell, if you pays my shecks, den I open de account." And the account was opened and passbook and check book handed to the new customer.

Half an hour later a close friend of the new depositor appeared at the cashier's window and presented a check signed by his friend for the full amount of the deposit, which was promptly paid by the banker without comment.

In about an hour the Swede appeared and, walking up to the cashier's window, handed the banker his check book minus only one check, with the remark, "Vell, I don't tank I needs him any more."

Soft Answer.

A New Jersey teacher who had been greatly annoyed by revelry in the hotel where she had spent part of one vacation took the precaution next time, in writing to another hotel which had been recommended to her, to inquire whether it had a bar. She received the following reply:

"No, we haven't any bar, and if that is the sort of woman you are we don't want you. The place for you is at Yardley's, farther up the road."—New York Post.

A Dear Dog.

Fred Kelly was negotiating with a street dealer for an Alredale pup. "How much?" asked Kelly. "Three dollars." "Well, I'll be along this afternoon again, and I may buy him." "Better take him now. He'll probably be $5 by then." "Why the raise?" "Oh," said the dealer, "probably I'll become attached to him by that time."—Saturday Evening Post.

THE PUP WAS RESISTING EVERY STEP.

to a window, she saw Harry down the street manfully pulling on a rope, the other end of which was tied around the neck of a small dog. The pup was resisting every step. Braced on all fours, it was pulling back with every ounce of its small might and barking as loudly as possible.

Presently Harry triumphantly entered the room. "Mother," he called, "won't you let me keep this little dog? It followed me home."—Judge.

Disappointment.

Saved the Smoke.

Brahms was always credited with a frugal mind, and the following tale is related of him, the late Erich Wolf and a cigarette: The cigarette had been offered by the former to the latter, who received it with emotion and placed it carefully in his waistcoat pocket. "Why do you put the cigarette away? Why not light it now?" asked Brahms, who had already struck a match. "I cannot smoke it," replied Wolf. "I shall take great care of it. It is not every day that one gets a cigarette from Johann Brahms." Thereupon the great man opened his cigarette case again and said with a smile of satisfaction, "Then just give me back the good cigarette, will you? For your purpose an imitation will serve just as well."
